Reds Open Drive to Split Nazis, Save Leningrad

Attack on 50-Mile Front; Report Foe Held in New Thrust On Lower Dnieper

'Desperate Measures'

Two great battles, the first a powerful offensive to break the German noose tightening about Leningrad, the second a bitter struggle for the great Don industrial region in the Ukraine, were reported last night in war dispatches from the Russian front.

News in London from Scandinavia, the United Press reported, indicated that Marshal Voroshilov's northern Soviet armies, a million and a half strong, had struck in a steadily developing movement 200 miles south of Leningrad in an effort to roll up the Germans seeking to encircle the former Czarist capital.

In the Ukraine, Marshal Semyon Budyenny's forces were reported officially to have hurled back successive German assaults near the town of "K," inflicting "enormous losses" on the enemy. The Moscow communique added that the Red Army fought stubbornly all day along the entire 1800-mile front, and that the Red airforce had destroyed 500 German planes in one week at a cost of 263 Russian aircraft.

Attack On 50-Mile Front

The Scandinavian dispatch said that the Russian offensive, including masses of tanks and planes, had been unleashed along a 50-mile front in an attempt to strike at the rear of Field Marshal Wilhelm Ritter von Leeb's German forces advancing upon Leningrad from the southwest.

The Germans were said to be taking "desperate measures" to meet the threat of Voroshilov's attack and a major battle was said to be developing in the marshlands between the Lovat and Polista Rivers.

Following his recent warning to Leningrad that the city's "hour of danger is at hand," Voroshilov hurled his attack along a front reaching from Kholm south to Toropets.

Kholm lies 200 miles south of Leningrad on the Lovat River, below Lake Ilmen, and Toropets is 80 miles farther south.

Voroshilov's objectives were said to be Pskov, 160 miles southwest of Leningrad, and Ostov, 30 miles farther south, both along the old Baltic frontiers.

Must Advance 80 Miles

The Scandinavian reports said that if Voroshilov's forces succeed in driving 80 miles westward from the Polista River to Pskov and Ostrov the Germans may be compelled to call off their "pincer" assault on Leningrad.

Both the German and Russian high commands were said to be concealing the new operations in their communiques because the battle, which promises to be one of the biggest of the two-month-old war, is only developing.

Moscow reported that in the Ukraine an attempt by three German divisions, about 48,000 men, to reach the eastern bank of an important river (perhaps the Dnieper) were shattered by Russian artillery and a bayonet charge of Soviet troops which stormed across the stream in a counterattack.

The Germans, fleeing in disorder, were said to have sought shelter in rye fields which were set ablaze

Folliard Reviews Two-Year War

Tomorrow brings to a close the second year of Hitler's march through Europe. And tomorrow's Post brings you Edward Folliard's swift summary of events—from the invasion of Poland to the war with Russia.

Guns for Soldiers

All Must Bear Defense Bill, But Congress Won't Face It

COST of the defense program, as now planned, will exceed 50 billion dollars.

That staggering sum isn't going into toy armament. America hopes it will buy for her security a machine of unsurpassed military might; for her soldiers, the best in equipment, and for England and Russia, table-turning aid.

To help finance such a program the House, August 5, passed a $3,200,000,000 tax bill, unprecedented in amount, but more than 2 billion dollars short of requirements.

"There is convincing evidence," the Ways and Means Committee reported, "that this burden will be borne cheerfully in the light of the overwhelming importance of national defense to the continued freedom and security of the United States.

"It is believed that the risk to life and property from an inadequate preparedness would make even a much heavier burden attractive by comparison."

By the time the bill passes the Senate there will be millions more taxpayers, each with a financial stake in the program, and each demanding something more than "inadequate preparedness."

Management, Foresight Lacking

YET the tax bill, for all its stiff imposts, is inadequate. All along the line it has missed its goal—in the form recommended by the Treasury, in the form it passed the House and in the form it seems likely to pass the Senate.

A bare four months has developed an admitted lack of foresight by all hands in planning this essential measure, paralleled only by the management and organizational shortcomings of the present defense set-up.

Broadening of the base was proposed as an afterthought, so that all might "chip in."

Use of taxes as a price check was belatedly injected.

Heightening and broadening of Social Security taxes as a curb on inflation was proposed at the eleventh hour.

Deficiencies in amount and scope and plan were discovered only after it was too late to do anything about them in the House, and apparently in the Senate.

That means another tax bill must be drafted next year of equal or greater size.

SOURCES, now considered politically immune, must be tapped to carry the full load in a year in which living costs will be higher and the burden less cheerfully borne.

The delay will cost the Treasury hundreds of millions of needed quick money just as each day's deferred passage of the present bill costs millions in revenue from new excises.

A little more insight in defense and fiscal planning, a little closer teamwork between the Treasury and Congress, and abandonment of political tax bogies would have averted this.

'Inadequate Even Before It Is Passed'

The tax structure would have had its face lifted in one operation instead of by repeated and more painful surgery.

On April 24, 1941, the Treasury laid its first plan before the Ways and Means Committee. It called for $3,500,000,000, the balance it said was needed to finance two-thirds of the Government's 1942 fiscal year defense operating costs.

JUST three months later, when the committee reported, defense outlays abruptly had risen. The Treasury's original proposal would meet only 60 per cent of expenditures.

From the $3,500,000,000 Treasury goal, the House knocked 300 million dollars its committee wished to raise from joint income tax returns. It made no effort to recoup the amount and the bill reached the Senate with only $3,200,000,000.

On August 2, the Treasury tax staff appeared before the Senate Finance Committee. Here Secretary Morgenthau testified that developments "made this bill inadequate even before it is passed." He said appropriations, authorizations and recommendations over the budget had increased about 14 billion dollars since his House appearance.

Now the Treasury recommended "at least" $3,500,000,000. It proposed taxes for 4 billion dollars. But it estimated $8,400,000,000 would be necessary to finance two-thirds of expenditures, the original formula.

Then, August 14, the Treasury disclosed it was studying higher Social Security taxes (broadened to include farm and domestic workers and supplementary benefits) with a view to preventing inflation and to cushion postwar dislocation.

Experts Have Their Private War

Confusion and disagreement on tax aims and methods, in the Administration and in Congress, was apparent in half-a-dozen incidents on the record. Disputes over method often overshadowed larger issues.

DIFFERENCES between several Federal agencies on phases of tax policy developed at the outset of House hearings.

Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of the Federal Reserve system, favored broadening of the income tax base nearly four months in advance of the Administration.

He joined with Leon Henderson, chief of OPACS, in recommending as well steeper excises on automobiles and other heavy goods competing with defense products, a policy the Treasury later conditionally accepted.

Behind the scenes a little private war was going on between experts of the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue and the Treasury, over methods and how the load should be spread over tax-

Army Moves to Let 200,000 Go, Announces 'Priorities' Plan

The War Department yesterday reaffirmed its intention to discharge nearly 200,000 men from the Army in the next four months and announced detailed plans for "priorities" in discharge.

First preference is to be given to properly established dependency and hardship cases. Consideration is to be given to other applications for release in the following order:

Men who have completed three-year or one-year enlistments in the Regular Army.

Selectees and National Guardsmen who were 28 or older at the time of their induction, regardless of the length of their service.

Selectees and Guardsmen who are married and have completed one year's service, regardless of their age.

The department announced again yesterday its hope that "it will not be necessary" to hold any draftees or Guardsmen in the Army for the full 30-month period recently authorized by Congress. A previous announcement indicated the average length of service would be about 18 months.

Soldiers eligible for release under the priorities schedule announced yesterday can make written application to their company commanders, who forward the requests to

Record Tax Bill Ready For Senate

Committee Raises Its Revenue Goal To 4 Billions, Well Above House Aims

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Senate Finance Committee yesterday completed action on a broad-based, surtax-laden national defense-tax bill estimated by committee leaders to yield four billion dollars in a full year of operation.

Officially the Treasury said the record tax measure would produce $3,672,400,000, or 456 million dollars more than the House bill.

Chairman George called the Treasury estimate conservative and said if present business trends continue the original revenue goal of 3500 million dollars will be overreached by half a billion.

Due on Floor Tuesday

Final committee approval was set for Tuesday and leaders made arrangements to lay the bill before the Senate on the following day.

As committee action closed on all except technical changes, the Treasury said the bill carried $1,394,700,000 in corporation taxes ($71,800,000 more than the House provided for); $1,197,200,000 in individual income taxes ($332,400,000 above the House provisions), and 939 million dollars in excise and miscellaneous taxes ($94,500,000 above the House bill).

Another $141,600,000 from estate taxes ($5,700,000 above the House); 16 million dollars from gift taxes (same as House), and a $16,100,000 net reduction from capital stock returns rounded out official yield totals.

Imposing the heaviest tax load in history, and overshooting the initial revenue mark, the bill nonetheless fell $1,727,600,000 shy of paying two-thirds of Government expenditures under the Treasury's financing formula.

Sales Taxers Hopeful

Senate adoption of a general manufacturers' sales tax and a withholding tax on pay rolls predicted Congress would have to come to one of these two remaining large reservoirs of revenue before another year is out, to carry defense costs.

Another group led by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, sought partially to offset future tax demands by scaling down the load of nondefense costs. The pending bill incorporates Byrd's plan for a 14-man joint committee study of possible economies.

The committee voted yesterday to give the Budget Bureau another month (until October 15) to submit alternative sets of estimates for reducing nondefense expenditures from one billion to two billion dollars.

Roosevelt, Byrd Agree

President Roosevelt meanwhile gave impetus to the Byrd economy move. Asked if nonessential spending could be cut, he replied emphatically in the affirmative. He said he did not know how much could be cut.

The President told reporters that for a long time he has advised reductions in nondefense spending. He added with a smile that after all, he did not pass the appropriation bills.

Senate committee work on the tax bill closed until after Labor Day with a committee understanding that only relatively minor changes will be considered when

President Visits The Site He Favors For War Building

President Roosevelt drove out to Arlington, Va., yesterday, and inspected the site which he favors for his own version of an Army "dream" building.

Before looking over the tract south of the Experimental Farm he told a press conference he favored a solid block of a building with windows only on the four outside walls.

Most employes would work by artificial light in mechanically supplied fresh air.

This kind of structure, eliminating interior shafts and courtyards, is evidently the "compromise" that has been worked out between the President, who wants a moderate-sized building, and Brig. Gen. B. H. Somervell, Army construction chief, who has insisted on one to house 40,000 workers.

The President said the design would save money and space.

Choked 10 Women, Catoe Says, Expects to Die for Slayings; Inquest Is Set for Tuesday

Fell Clutch of Circumstance

Chance Led Catoe's Victims to Their Deaths

Mrs. Abramowitz Wanted Someone To Wax Floors

By George W. Thorpe
Post Staff Writer

Chance, as unfathomable as it was grim, was accountable for the rape-deaths of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff and Rose Simons Abramowitz.

Since these crimes were committed, a thousand Washington women have told themselves:

"That might have been me."

A thousand Washington men have said: "That might have been my wife."

They were right.

Pure chance, as well as Jarvis Roosevelt Catoe, the confessed murderer, was responsible for the slayings of these two women.

The suspect's confession and police reconstruction of the crimes established this yesterday.

At 9:25 a. m. March 8, Mrs. Abramowitz was standing in her apartment at 1901 Sixteenth Street Northwest, probably gazing ruefully at the floor of her kitchen. The linoleum was badly in need of waxing.

BETTY STRIBLING, as she left Detective Bureau after identifying Miss Strieff's umbrella

Leaving her apartment, she descended to the lobby of the apartment house in search of the janitor. Had she found him, Mrs. Abramowitz would have ordered him to wax her floors. He was nowhere in evidence.

When Mrs. Abramowitz came to the sidewalk she noticed a Negro

Miss Strieff Accepted Ride on a Rainy Day, Killer Tells Police

walking up T Street, near Sixteenth Street, only a few feet away.

"Have you seen the janitor?" she inquired of Catoe, thinking he might be acquainted with the employe.

"No, I haven't," Catoe replied.

"Have you the time to do some work for me?" Mrs. Abramowitz explained.

"What kind of work?" inquired the man.

"Waxing my floors," she answered.

Catoe volunteered to do the waxing.

Anxious to get the work done, Mrs. Abramowitz told the man to follow her upstairs. She led him through the living room and into the kitchen where she pointed to the unwaxed linoleum.

Suddenly, Catoe told police, he grabbed Mrs. Abramowitz around the throat, throttled her, and assaulted her. Then, calmly, he carried her dying into her bedroom.

Confessed Killer Blames 'Nervous Spells' for Seven Sex Murders

(Other Stories, Pictures on Pages 3 and 14.)

A coroner's inquest into the rape slaying of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff was set last night for 11:30 a. m. Tuesday as Washington justice moved swiftly to bring to account 36-year-old Jarvis Roosevelt Catoe.

Confessed killer of Miss Strieff, five other Washington women and a New York waitress, the Negro prisoner arrested Thursday sat last night in a Twelfth Precinct Station cell after a recital of events that stunned even the most veteran policemen.

A special police guard kept continual watch over the prisoner as a precaution against escape or suicide.

Choked "About Ten"

"About ten," was Catoe's reply when Capt. Ira Keck, assistant chief of detectives, asked him yesterday afternoon how many women he had choked.

The prisoner held out the fingers of both hands to illustrate.

"What's the matter with you?" asked Keck.

"Have spells," was the reply.

"How often do you have them?"

"I don't know. I have them sometimes when I drink a little wine, but not always."

"What makes you do those things?"

"I feel like that after reading detective stories about rape cases and looking at pictures of nude women. I did wrong and I'm glad to get it off my mind. I did it and I'm sorry."

Not "Nervous" Any More

Catoe said, in reply to another question, that he wasn't nervous any more.

"I've got to give my life but I'm glad it's off my mind," he declared.

He said he always used his hands in killing, though earlier he had told detectives he used a belt to strangle Miss Strieff.

An indication as to what Catoe meant by "spells" came last night from his younger brother, John, who said the confessed killer had fallen from a truck 13 years ago, suffering a fractured skull, and since then "had occasional spells and acted sort of queer."

Even while in the hospital, he choked several doctors and nurses, said the brother.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, announced that he would certify the rape-murder cases of Mrs. Rose Abramowitz and four Washington Negro women to the grand jury without inquests.

Jury Already Sworn

A coroner's jury was sworn in at the District Morgue shortly after discovery on June 16 of the body of Miss Strieff, 23-year-old War Department clerk. It is this group which will hear evidence against Catoe, a former cab driver and undertaker's assistant, and decide whether he is to be held for the grand jury.

Positive identification late yesterday of the white umbrella carried by Miss Strieff when she left her midtown apartment on June 15, never to return, tightened the web about Catoe.

Betty Stribling, a Federal worker who was Miss Strieff's friend, went to police headquarters and examined the umbrella. It had been recovered by police on information willingly supplied by the mild, cooperative prisoner, who said he had given it to a woman living in the 1500 block of Swann Street Northwest.

"That positively is my umbrella!" exclaimed Miss Stribling, when it was produced by Detective Sergt. Aubrey Tolson.

8 More Die Before Paris Firing Squad

Laval Near Death, Doctors Decide Upon Hazardous Operation

By the Associated Press

Vichy (Saturday), Aug. 30.—Eight more persons have been executed in Paris for aiding enemies, dispatches from Paris reported today, bringing to 11 the number executed since the attempted assassination of Pierre Laval and Marcel Deat Wednesday.

Meanwhile, Laval was reported from Paris to be close to death—so close that his doctors decided to extract the bullet that lies dangerously near his heart, in an effort to save his life.

Three of those executed, including Naval Lieut. Count Henri Destienne Dorbes, were condemned for espionage, presumably for DeGaullists.

The other five were accused under the new French law providing death for "activity against the occupying power."

All eight were stood up against a wall at Vincennes Prison, just outside Paris, and shot to death by a firing squad from the French Garde Mobile.

Among those condemned for espionage was a Netherlands citizen named Jean Doornik. Others executed were all French.

None of the eight was described as a Communist, indicating the French had dropped the idea of "anti-Red courts" two days after they started working.

S. M. Stonestreet, Marine Air Cadet, Dies After Crash

Aviation Cadet Samuel M. B. Stonestreet, U. S. Marine Corps Reserve, of 2006 Columbia Road Northwest, died at 8 a. m. yesterday at the Naval Air Station, Miami, from injuries suffered in an aviation accident in the line of duty.

Stonestreet, 21, was born in Long Beach, Calif. In Washington for 13 years, he was a graduate of Western High School and Landon Preparatory School, and attended Dartmouth College for two years. He left college to enlist in the Marine Corps Reserve in April of 1940, and was appointed an aviation cadet in December of 1940. First ordered to duty at the Naval Air Station in Pensacola, he was transferred to Miami in July.

He leaves his mother, Mrs. Esther W. Stonestreet, and his sister, Molly Stonestreet, both of Washington.

The Navy gave no details of the accident.

Conferences Continuing

Japan Firm on Major Issues, U. S. Awaits 2 Roosevelt Talks

'Wake Up America' Speeches Expected From President

President Roosevelt is expected to continue his "Wake Up America" campaign this weekend with two speeches that may develop into important reports to the country on foreign policy.

While the Chief Executive and Secretary of State Hull remained mum about their talks with the Japanese Ambassador, Admiral Nomura, President Roosevelt departed last night for what may be a historic weekend at his Hyde Park, N. Y., home.

The President is scheduled to address the original Roosevelt Home Club tomorrow afternoon at the home of its organizer, Moses Smith, the President's farm tenant. Though the setting for the annual late-August function is always informal, the President chose it last year as the occasion to reveal his nomination of Frank C. Walker to the Cabinet to replace James A. Farley as Postmaster General.

To Speak on Labor Day

On Labor Day, the President is scheduled to make a 15-minute radio address to the Nation, probably from a desk in the new Roosevelt Library on the family estate.

Significantly, the President pointed out yesterday that Labor Day is also the second anniversary of the start of the present war, a hint that he might be reserving an important pronouncement for Monday. He is scheduled to broadcast between noon and 1 p. m.

Mr. Roosevelt curtly dismissed a press conference question yesterday on whether Germany had sent any reply to this Government's communication accusing her of torpedoing the American freighter Robin Moor in the South Atlantic. The communication was merely a copy of the President's message to Congress on the subject. The President referred his questioner to the State Department, where no information was made public.

The President carefully avoided

Insist on Setting Up 'Co-Prosperity Sphere,' Says Domei

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Saturday), Aug. 30.—The Japanese insisted today that Japan was holding firm on establishment of a "co-prosperity sphere" of influence as a prerequisite to lasting Pacific peace, despite "the very delicate relations existing between Japan and the United States" over the Russo-German war.

A Domei Agency statement on delivery of a message from Premier Prince Konoye to President Roosevelt Thursday gave that view of the situation and said Japan wanted to end the China war and establish a permanent peace in East Asia.

Deplore Aid to China

Iichi Kishi, a government spokesman, said, moreover, that the "unfortunate Chinese-Japanese hostilities" were being prolonged by United States-British aid to Chiang Kai-shek.

The announced intention to seek an end to the Chinese War involved no change in government policy, each cabinet since the war started July 7, 1937, having been pledged to attempt a cleanup of the "incident."

The Domei statement, issued while the cabinet and highest military officials met in emergency session yesterday to consider the Japanese situation, said:

"Well-informed circles are of the opinion that what Japan is aiming at under the prevailing complex international situation is disposal of the China affair and construction of the East Asia co-prosperity sphere with the ultimate object of ushering in an era of permanent peace in the Pacific, and in consideration of the very delicate relations existing between Japan and the United States following the outbreak of the Russian-German War, Prince Konoye conveyed Japan's firm conviction on this broad viewpoint to President Roosevelt."

Kishi said that United States shipments of oil and war supplies to Russia via Vladivostok undoubt-

Aid Expediter Chosen

Harriman to Head Mission To Reds, Brett to Tour Front

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

W. Averill Harriman, lease-lend "expediter" in London, was named yesterday by President Roosevelt to head an American mission which will soon leave for Moscow to discuss war aid to Russia.

The American delegation is expected to confer with British and Russian military supply experts on the types of munitions most urgently needed by the U. S. S. R. and the most efficient methods of shipment.

Mr. Roosevelt told his press conference that other members of Harriman's mission would be appointed next week.

Meanwhile the War Department revealed that Maj. Gen. George H. Brett, Chief of the Army Air Corps, is to make an aerial inspection of the fighting fronts on three continents.

Chief purpose of the tour is to give Gen. Brett and a special staff of American air war experts a first-hand picture of British—and perhaps Russian—aircraft requirements and plane maintenance problems.

The War Department announcement acknowledged the existence of "bottlenecks in the use of American equipment," which is attributed

Hitler, Duce Pledge Era of Prosperity

Dictators Declare Aims for Peace After Five-Day Meeting at Front

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 29.—Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini ended a five-day secret conference within the sound of gunfire on the Eastern Front today and issued a communique calling for a full Axis victory and promising an order of prosperity for all continental Europe shorn of the causes of past wars.

The German press instantly likened the conference to that of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill on the Atlantic, which was announced August 14, and asserted Roosevelt and Churchill made a poor show in comparison.

"Even the external picture of the Fuehrer-Duce meeting stands in sharp contrast to the conference of War Agitators Churchill and Roosevelt on the other side of the Atlantic off the Newfoundland Banks," said the National Zeitung of Essen, Reichmarshal Goering's paper.

"Unchangeable Will"

The communique said the Axis leaders discussed all military and political questions concerning the development and duration of the war, and continued:

"The discussions were permeated with the unchangeable will of both peoples and their leaders to wage war to a victorious end.

"The new European order which will emanate from this victory will remove as extensively as possible the causes which gave rise in the past to European wars.

"Destruction of the Bolshevist danger and of plutocratic exploitation will create the possibility of peaceful, harmonious and profitable cooperation of all peoples of the European continent in the political as well as in the economic and cultural spheres."

"A Creative Idea"

(The Roosevelt-Churchill statement of aims after "the final destruction of Nazi tyranny," pledged the United States and Britain to no aggrandizement, and called for peace, freedom, economic prosperity and self-determination for all the world's peoples, freedom of the seas and disarmament of aggressor nations.)

The general trend of German press comment was that the Roosevelt-Churchill Atlantic declaration "preserves historic injustices" while the Axis new order "is a creative idea," but specific definitions of the new order still were lacking.

An authorized Berlin comment was:

"The two men of destiny, the creators of a new order, have served notice there will not be another peace like that of Versailles."

The communique said Hitler and Mussolini visited important points on the Russian front, at one place inspecting an Italian division employed against the Soviets. They also visited headquarters of Reichsmarshal Goering and Field Marshal Walter von Brauchitsch, commander of the German army.

It was reported here that all spots where decisive actions were under way were visited.

Participating with Hitler in the political discussions was German Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop, while Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel was present for military talks.

Mussolini was accompanied by Dino Alfieri, Italian ambassador to Berlin, Gen. Ugo Cavallero, chief of the Italian general staff, and other Italian civilian and military officials, political and technical advisers.

The German ambassador to Rome, Hans-Georg Viktor von Mackensen, and his military attache also accompanied Mussolini.

Duce Flies Hitler Back From Front

Rome, Aug. 29 (AP).—Premier Mussolini piloted Adolf Hitler's heavy airplane back from the German-Russian front during their visit, Italian correspondents reported tonight.

The correspondents said Hitler and Mussolini had long talks alone in a big tent. They were escorted by armored cars and mobile anti-aircraft guns on their tours of the front and ate soldiers' rations of soup and black bread, the dispatches said.

They said the German populace turned out to cheer Il Duce when he passed through the Reich last Sunday. He smiled from the window of his car.

Hitler met Mussolini midway on the trip to the front, it was stated. Mussolini wore the field uniform of a first marshal of the Italian empire. He exchanged salutes with Hitler, who wore an olive drab uniform. The two rode in a military automobile to the Fuehrer's headquarters, followed by their staffs.

Visit Headquarters

Sometimes they were alone for hours and at other times they met with their staffs to discuss "all problems interesting to the allied nations at the moment and for the near future" the official agency Stefani reported, without "the possibility" of telling exactly what they discussed.

Hitler accompanied Mussolini on a visit to army headquarters, where Field Marshal Walter Von-Brauchitsch traced developments of operations for the Duce on enormous maps.

Stefani said that at that very time "confirmation of a new and powerful success arrived" and figures of booty and prisoners were marked beside arrows showing the location of Russian divisions.

Mussolini and Hitler began their trip to the northern front by airplane at dawn Tuesday. Mussolini was said to have piloted the plane on the return from this trip.

Goering Shows Charts

On Wednesday they visited other commands by plane, hearing details of "conquests at the front" from the German generals. Then they visited Reichsmarshal Goering, who showed them charts of what the Luftwaffe had done. At the edge of an airfield Mussolini saw a Soviet plane which had been destroyed on the ground.

Goering gave Mussolini an album of photographs which the Duce's son Bruno had taken when he visited German air bases on the Atlantic coast. Bruno died in an air crash August 7.

On the last day of the trip, on the southern front, Mussolini met his own soldiers. Gen. Giovanni Messe, commander of the Italian expeditionary corps, waited with his staff officers at a crossroad. He reported on operations and morale of the men and efficiency of the troops. A few miles further on the Duce found an Italian motorized column on the march to the front line.

Fire-Ravaged Tallinn Falls To Germans

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 29.—A German land, aerial and naval offensive in which 22 Red transports and 10 warships were sunk has captured Tallinn, Estonia, and its harbor of Paldiski, driving entrapped Russians into the sea and laying Leningrad open to imminent peril from the west, the high command declared today.

The fall of long-isolated Tallin, which completed the Nazi conquest of all the Baltic buffer states taken over by the Soviet Union in the last two years, was accomplished by a fierce and continuing action in the Gulf of Finland against the surviving forces in flight from the flaming city, in dozens of troopships and fighting craft.

German soldiers entering Tallinn described its harbor as a desolate scene—with Russian warships keeled over and the masts of sunken ships showing.

German dive-bombers had devasted wide areas ashore, they said, and much of the city, including the chief railroad station, had been burned.

This retreat from the ancient Hanseatic port, which had been bypassed in the original German push eastward, was under a running German bombing and naval attack so violent that its thunders could be heard 50 miles away in Helsinki, Finland.

It was, said a German spokesman, "another Dunkerque."

Already in hand, it was claimed, were several thousand Red prisoners, six coastal batteries and much Russian war material.

Aside from 32 Soviet ships destroyed, it was assered that seven warships, including the 8,800-ton cruiser Kirov, were heavily damaged.

Kronstadt, the naval base of Leningrad and the sole remaining base on the Russian mainland for the Red fleet in the Gulf of Finland, was described as now gravely threatened.

Tonight, the Germans declared, Leningrad was almost completely cut off from the rest of Russia on the land side and now the Gulf of Finland has become extremely dangerous to Russia's considerable Baltic fleet, with German planes laying thousands of mines and the Nazis controlling the coast through powerful shore batteries.

In the Baltic outside the gulf the Russians still held two formidable island strongholds—Dagoe and Oesel—but in Paldiski the Germans claimed to have the more vital base. The German aim, it appeared, was to divide the Russian Baltic fleet by bottling up part of it at Kronstadt and forcing other craft into the Baltic to stay in those waters.

According to German naval authorities two of Russia's three Czarist battleships—the 23,000-ton Marat and the October Revolution—are in the Baltic or at Kronstadt. Both were built in 1911 and later modernized.

Other vessels known to have been in the Baltic were the 8,800-ton cruiser Maxim Gorki and two other cruisers.

Dispatches from the Eastern Front generally were scanty today, but it was insisted here that the campaign in the Ukraine was continuing with the greatest vigor.

The President's Day

By International News Service

TROUBLE-SHOOTER, JR.: Promptly at 10:30 a. m., the President received the press in shirtsleeves and a new plaid tie, told them Averell Harriman would become another Hopkins-type, round-the-world trouble shooter, and will head up the United States mission to the Moscow conference. The President talked good-naturedly and with much less acid than has of late. Probable reason for Mr. Roosevelt's beam and mellow mood was the impending Labor Day weekend at Hyde Park which annually boasts at least a couple of informal, come-one-come-all picnics of the kind the President enjoys enormously.

Tomorrow afternoon he attends the regular, yearly country-style picnic at his tenant farmer Moses Smith's place. He will talk extemporaneously to the gathered farmers, neighbors, county politicians. Secretary Morgenthau's yearly picnic is also on the fire and Mrs. Roosevelt will pull off her annual outdoor high-tea late Saturday afternoon.

STATE STUFF: Secretary of State Hull and Undersecretary Welles called for lengthy talks with the President yesterday—Welles in the morning, Hull in the afternoon. Neither had anything but "hello" to say to questioners waiting outside, but railbirds knew that the discussions had more than a little to do with the Far Eastern situation.

THE TEAM: In for an early lunch and chat with Roosevelt were Harry Hopkins, senior missionary for the White House, and the fledgling Harriman. Conversation focused on aid and the projected Harriman trek to Russia.

PRESIDENTIAL POWDER: After a two-hour conference with his Cabinet, the President took a powder, sneaked out of his office to a waiting car and rolled over the bridge to Arlington for a look at various possible sites for the new, much-argued War Department Building. Back in time for a refresher before dinner, the President took the rough draft of his Labor Day speech over from the office to the White House study, worked some more on it after dinner, before train time.

Same Pattern Seen In 16 Sex Crimes

All of Victims, Except Three Slain White Women, Ran Rooming Houses, Catoe Says

Jarvis Roosevelt Catoe, 36-year-old Negro, by his own admission, committed an amazing total of 16 sex crimes, including 7 brutal rape-murders, in 18 months, beginning on St. Valentine's Day last year.

His depredations with the exception of the slayings of Rose Abramowitz, Jessie Elizabeth Strieff and Evelyn D. Andersen, were committed on Negro women, all of whom operated rooming houses.

It was this fact—the similarity in all of the cases involving Negroes—which convinced local detectives in their investigation after Catoe's arrest Thursday.

First of the mysterious criminal attacks was reported by a 56-year-old Negro woman of T Street Northwest, on February 14, 1940. During the ensuing months, ending with the Strieff murder, reports of criminal attacks came in at intervals.

Crimes Follow Pattern

Each reported a rooming house keeper assaulted by a dark-skinned Negro. Three of the assault victims were strangled.

The attack on the T Street woman was typical of all the others. She was alone in her home when a man who said he was a mechanic sought to rent a room.

He insisted, the woman said, on seeing all of her vacant rooms—a request designed to survey the house to determine the number of occupants. The woman was home alone, the intruder learned, and he criminally assaulted her, Catoe said.

Catoe next admitted attempting to enter the home of a 45-year-old Negro woman on S Street Northwest on August 30. She would not let him in, however, because of a previous warning from police to be on the lookout for the man described by the first woman.

Same Modus Operandi

It was about 11 a. m. when he approached the second woman. At 2:30 p. m. the same day, Catoe confessed, he went to the home of still another Negro woman, 30, on Eleventh Street Northwest. He lured her to the basement and criminally assaulted her.

Ten days later, Catoe attacked a 65-year-old Negro woman at her Ward Place Northwest home, he said.

Catoe admits that his next foray on September 27 ended in the murder of Lucy Kidwell, 56, Negro, who was raped and strangled in her home at 307 Virginia Avenue Southeast. He had gone there in response to a "room for rent" advertisement. After making a survey of the premises to be sure none was home to hear her screams, he dragged her into the basement.

On October 26, a colored man attempted to enter a rooming house on Lamont Street Northwest. The woman refused him admittance and he went away.

From that time on Catoe's crimes became more vicious and more frequent. On November 26, according to his statements, he criminally assaulted a 62-year-old Negro woman on R Street Northwest.

His Second Murder

Two days later he committed his second murder. He admits strangling to death Mattie Steward, 48, Negro, at 1423 Swann Street Northwest.

Catoe told police that on December 17, he attacked a Negro woman on Fairmont Street Northwest, in his automobile, where he lured her on the pretense of driving her to work.

Catoe's last four confessed attacks ended with the deaths of his victims, he admitted.

Ada Puller, 21, Negro, of no fixed address, was strangled in a washroom at an apartment house at 1332 Corcoran Street Northwest, on January 22 of this year.

Rose Simons Abramowitz was slain in her apartment at 1901 Sixteenth Street Northwest, March 8.

Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, 23, was strangled June 15, in a garage behind 1509 S Street Northwest.

Evelyn Anderson, 36-year-old New York waitress, was choked to death in New York on August 4.

The suspect admitted to police three other sex crimes, but a search of the record showed they have never been reported to police.

CONFESSION—Showing his powerful hands, Jarvis R. Catoe tells Capt. Ira Keck at police headquarters how he strangled his victims

Choked 10 Women, Catoe Says; Inquest Set for Tuesday

Attorney's office came into an important courtroom exhibit which is expected to figure prominently in their attempt to send Catoe to the electric chair.

It was the identification of the umbrella, together with the fact that the Strieff slaying was the most recent of the crimes ascribed to Catoe and the fact that a signed confession had been obtained, that prompted the decision to base Tuesday's inquest on this single case.

"As soon as the coroner's inquest is held," said Acting United States Attorney John W. Fihelly, "the Jesse Strieff and the Rose Abramowitz cases will be presented to the grand jury. If indictments are returned, they will be set down for immediate trial.

"The only way to prevent and discourage such offenses is to have it known and clearly understood that the offenders will be quickly apprehended, speedily tried and most certainly properly punished."

Herring Tempers Praise

In like vein was the statement issued by Senator Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, Miss Strieff's home State, who had criticized police delay in solving the crime.

"The apprehension of a man who confessed to the murder of Betty Strieff is gratifying, and I congratulate Superintendent Kelly," said the Senator.

"However, it must be recognized that the manner in which this vicious character was run to earth demonstrates conclusively the need for complete reorganization along the lines outlined in the bill which I introduced in Congress.

"This bill brings into the law enforcement staff of the District all resources of the FBI, the organization which has so successfully reduced to the vanishing point crimes for whose solution it is responsible throughout the Nation."

Senator Herring asserted that "seven or eight lives" would have been saved if "this criminal had been ferreted out and punished after the commission of his first crime."

"A further proof of the necessity for a different handling of the crime problem in the District," he continued, "is found in the fact that this man has lived right here in Washington within a few blocks of the scenes of his crimes and yet it remained for the New York police force to find him and bring about his arrest and confession."

Catoe's address since Tuesday has been a rooming house at 1704 Swann Street, into which he moved with a woman presumed to be his wife. Previously he had lived in a rooming house in the 1700 block of U Street Northwest (1730).

Near Crime Scenes

Each address is only a few blocks from the apartment house at 1900 Sixteenth Street Northwest where Mrs. Abramowitz, a recent bride, was attacked and murdered on March 8.

Also within short walking distance is the garage in 1300 block of S Street, where Catoe says he raped and strangled Miss Strieff, and the garage in the 1700 block of Q Street where he deposited her unclothed body after driving it there in his sedan.

Still in the Capital last night were the two New York detectives whose perseverance led to the "breaking" of the most sensational series of murders this city has ever known. They are Andrew M. O'Connor and John J. Carroll, of the Bronx.

Traced Through Watch

The New York detectives were on the trail of the slayer of Mrs. Evelyn D. Andersen, 36-year-old Bronx waitress, when they and Washington police arrested Catoe Thursday morning as he entered his car, parked in front of his Swann Street residence.

He was traced to Washington through a wrist watch which had been taken from Mrs. Andersen and later discovered in a pawn shop. The man who pawned it said it was given to him by a woman who, when questioned, gave New York police Catoe's Washington address.

Although the Bronx County grand jury yesterday indicted Catoe for first degree murder in the strangling of Mrs. Andersen on August 4, chances are nil that he will be extradited. Police pointed out that the Strieff, Abramowitz and other Washington cases also are capital offenses and, besides, antedate the Andersen murder.

"I am satisfied he is the man who killed my wife," said Barney Abramowitz, husband of one of the Washington victims, yesterday.

Two Unsolved Slayings Still Face Police

Two slayings still remain to be solved by Washington police before they will clear their blotter of the recent major crimes which brought about a Congressional investigation and a shakeup of the department.

Early on the morning of May 6 Dr. Heinrich S. Simon, 61-year-old refugee German editor, returned to his home at 1816 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, with a skull injury, the apparent result of an assault. Three hours later he died at Garfield Hospital without describing his assailants.

Still at work on the case, police recently completed the questioning of four youths, two of whom are inmates of the Industrial Home School, one of the National Training School, and a fourth who was arrested two days ago. They are charged with stealing two taxis and admit being in the vicinity of Seventeenth and Corcoran Streets Northwest on the night Dr. Simon was walking in the area.

A youth at the Industrial Home School told police of a conversation he overheard there between two of the youths concerning the Simon slaying which led police to question them on the case. The district attorney's office turned their testimony over to the Juvenile Court. Judge Fay Bentley is now considering their cases.

On May 24 Lewis T. Kern, 29, of 1205 Gallatin Street Northwest, was found dead with a bullet in his head in a rooming house at 1507 Columbia Street Northwest—the same vicinity in which the slayings of Simon, Mrs. Abramowitz and Miss Strieff took place.

His auto was found in front of the Columbia Street address, apparently parked in haste.

James R. McKenzie, 21-year-old Negro, is being held in District Jail, condemned to death by a District Court jury for the rape of Mrs. Vada K. Abarca, 26, in a Fourteenth Street laundry agency on June 24. His attorneys have appealed his case to the Circuit Court of Appeals.

He was convicted July 30—35 days after Mrs. Abarca was robbed and ravished at the laundry. It was one of the most rapid prosecutions on record here.

Fall Deranged Catoe's Mind, Brother Feels

Jarvis Roosevelt Catoe, confessed strangler of seven women, started choking people back in 1928.

John Catoe, of 807 Twentieth Street Northwest, younger brother of the 36-year-old killer, said last night that his brother suffered a skull injury 13 years ago in Charlotte, N. C., when thrown from a truck. He believes the injury affected his mind. It was suggested at the time, he said, to have his brother committed to an institution, but other members of the family objected.

Choked His Nurse

"It was a great shock to me," Catoe said, "when I saw my brother's picture in the paper. I could hardly believe that he was the one who had killed those poor girls. Yet, now, after thinking it all over, I can understand how it could have happened.

"When he was in the hospital in Charlotte he would often get out of hand and choke the nurses and doctors. When he finally left the hospital he had occasional spells and acted sort of queer. We could not do anything with him so I brought him to Washington in 1929."

Catoe said his brother is normal most of the time.

Glad He Was Caught

"I'm not trying to cover up anything for him," he continued. "I think it is one of the most horrible things I have ever heard of—the killing of those innocent people. The man has been sick mentally and he should have been put away long ago. It's bad enough as it is with—how many is it? seven murders?—but I'm glad the police got him before he killed any more. And I'm afraid that's what would have happened.

"As I said I'm not trying to cover up anything he did. People like him should be put some place so they can't do any harm. I want to see justice take its course. If the jury and the judge think he should be pumished in the chair, well, that's the way it should be" paying groups. The result was a draw.

Defense Bill Not Yet Faced

The Treasury wanted to start surtaxes on individuals at 11 per cent on the first taxable dollar. The House started these at 5. The Senate Finance Committee started them at 6, absorbing the 10 per cent defense tax.

The President and the Treasury insisted excess profits taxation be based on invested capital. The House stuck by its "optional" plan, giving the taxpayer the choice of an average earnings base. So did the Senate committee.

The Treasury wanted higher excises on tobacco, beer and gasoline. The House committee and the House and the Senate committee bucked, and out they went.

Nor would the House or the Senate committee go the full Treasury route for steep estate and gift taxes with lower exemptions.

TO ONE significant reform produced by the House committee the Treasury appeared cool until the last minute. This imposed compulsory joint returns on husbands and wives. It would have pulled in 300 million dollars more revenue, chiefly from high income married couples now able to avoid top surtax brackets by separating their returns.

Into the tax bill it went. For three days the House raged in debate. It was the only floor fight of the bill. Community property States, backed by women's rights and religious groups, bitterly fought the proviso.

After the debate, but before the vote, the President wrote Chairman Doughton a letter. He favored the principal of joint returns, but not in the form proposed by the committee. He asked special credits for earned income. It was too late to revise the provision. The House defeated the entire reform, plus 300 million dollars in revenue. The Senate committee, ditto.

Votes Count In Making Tax Laws

That letter from the President, dated August 1, contained other material, too late for House action, but which has changed the whole course of individual income taxation in the Senate. For the first time, lowering of individual income tax exemptions was projected as Administration policy. It proposed that single exemptions be cut from $800 to $750, and exemptions for married persons from $2000 to $1500.

The House bill placed the steep, new individual income tax burden chiefly on the present numerically outnumbered and outvoted body of taxpayers.

THE GREAT MASS of voters lie in the lower income groups unreached by Federal income tax. Politically it has been considered unwise to touch them directly, although all are taxed indirectly by excises or by Social Security levies.

Before the House committee, the Treasury opposed broadening the base. Argument used was that single persons making less than $15 a week or married persons earning less than $38 could not bear the tax. It would cost more to collect such taxes, the Treasury said, than they would net.

But with the President's letter the Treasury shifted its position and before the Senate Finance Committee on August 8 it recommended base broadening. It made its proposal conditional on reaching upward as well as downward for "all out" taxes.

"Our tax program has not kept pace with the defense program," Morgenthau told the committee. "We are still thinking too much of helping this group or that to escape its share of the burden.

It Reached The Senate In Time

"We have now come to the point where it is a matter not merely of fundamental equity, but of the utmost necessity that all exemptions from taxation be reduced to the absolute minimum."

Submitted at the same time was a plan to simplify income tax forms for those earning less than $3000, so that it would cost the Treasury less to collect and minimize "figuring" by the taxpayer.

Explicitly, also for the first time, the Treasury recommended compulsory joint return by husband and wife.

THE base-broadening proposal reached the Senate committee in time; the joint return recommendation, too late. The House was already on record against joint returns. Senators argued an attempt to revive it would be slapped down by the House.

Later, and not yet submitted to a Congressional committee, came the Treasury proposal to hike Social Security taxes and broaden their coverage as a further guard against inflation.

Integration of taxation with control of purchasing power and prices, a policy often urged by Henderson, had begun.

Tax planning, in fact, has only just begun.

For taxes haven't caught up with defense needs. It is doubtful they will this year. As in the case of defense building, the conception was slow and the management divided.

The Senate committee shot at a higher total than the House but the bill completed yesterday officially carried NOT $5,400,000,000 in new taxes or even four billion, but $3,672,400,000.

There will be another tax bill next year. It will be really "all out."

An adequately executed bill this year, with cooperation by Congress, might have served.

Tomorrow: Half Rations for a Double Appetite

Police Praised By Randolph In Catoe Case

Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, yesterday offered "genuine commendation" to those who captured Catoe.

He said, "The apparent solution of the Strieff and Abramowitz murder cases is highly gratifying. Those responsible for the capture and confession deserve genuine commendation. Solutions to such cases are usually exceedingly difficult.

"Perseverence in this particular instance has brought results. As chairman of the House District Committee, I congratulate all those who have contribute to the running down of the prisoner."

Representative F. Edward Herbert (Democrat), of Louisiana, a member of the special police subcommittee which recently completed its investigation of the Metropolitan force, told the Associated Press in New Orleans yesterday:

"It is a solace to know that Washington apparently has come under the protection of efficient police direction. I believe Washington is entering upon a new era of law enforcement under Commissioner Young and Superintendent Kelly."

Herring's Praise Is Faint

The method whereby the Strieff case was solved indicates that the Federal Bureau of Investigation should be responsible for working on major crime in Washington, Senator Clyde F. Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, a friend of Betty Strieff's family, said yesterday.

Congratulating Superintendent of Police Kelly, Senator Herring said, however, that it took New York police to crack the case. He is the author of a bill placing major crimes here within the jurisdiction of the FBI.

His statement said in part:

"The apprehension of a man who confesses to the murder of Betty Strieff is gratifying, and I congratulate Superintendent Kelly.

"However, it must be recognized that the manner in which this vicious character was run to earth demonstrates conclusively the need for complete reorganization along the lines outlined in the bill which I introduced in the Congress. This bill brings into the law enforcement staff of the District all the resources of the FBI.

"The cruel facts are that had this criminal been ferreted out and punished after the commission of his first crime, seven or eight lives would have been saved, and the commission of countless outrages would have been prevented.

"A further proof of the necessity for a different handling of the crime problem in the District is found in the fact that this man has lived right here in Washington, within a few blocks of the scenes of his crimes, and yet it remained for the New York police force to find him and bring about his arrest and confession."

Rape Victims Met Death by Chance

placed her on the bed and smoothed out her rumpled dress.

Again.

At 2 p. m. June 15 Betty Strieff left her apartment house, 2110 Nineteenth Street Northwest, to buy a stick of butter at some nearby delicatessen. Her fiance, Stanley LeBlanc, was coming to call an hour later. She and her roommate, Christine Tankersley, were to lunch in the meantime.

Miss Strieff walked south on Nineteenth Street and when she arrived at the intersection of Florida Avenue it commenced to rain—hard.

Just at this time she saw a black sedan approaching down Nineteenth Street. Through the rain it looked like a taxi, and the Negro at the wheel wore a chauffeur's cap. She held up her hand.

The car pulled up and stopped.

"Oh, I'm sorry," said Miss Strieff, inspecting the car more closely and recognizing it as a private automobile.

At this point, Catoe's account and police theories differ. The suspect quotes himself as follows:

"No, this isn't a cab, lady. But can I take you where you're going." Then, says Catoe, Miss Strieff climbed in the car.

Police believe Catoe grabbed the girl and pulled her into the auto.

At any rate, Catoe admits that after driving her down Florida Avenue a block on the pretext of taking Miss Strieff to a delicatessen he turned back. Then drove until he reached an alley near Fifteenth and S Streets, swung into a garage, and there attacked her.

Had it not been for Mrs. Abramowitz's unwaxed floor and a sudden squall of rain, both workings of chance, Betty Strieff and Rose Abramowitz probably would be alive today.

20,000 in Philippines Answer Army Call

Manila, Aug. 29 (AP).—More than 20,000 Philippine army reservists have reported to mobilization centers, the first step toward their incorporation in the United States Army as ordered by President Roosevelt, the Philippine command announced today.

The reserve troops, together with more than 1000 officers mobilized earlier this week, will place an additional ten regiments under Lieut. Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur's command September 1.

Duration of service for the reservists is uncertain.

MARGARET SULLAVAN

By the Associated Press

Hollywood, Aug. 29.—Margaret Sullavan, who astounded Hollywood and Broadway by bearing three children in four years, wants three more.

"I think," said the stage and screen actress, "that six children will be about right."

Husband Leland Hayward, airline executive and talent representative, is in perfect accord, added the five-foot, 100-pound star.

Miss Sullavan said she was considering adoption to complete her family and had thought tentatively of taking a Dutch, a Spanish and a French child. "That," she laughed, "would give our home the appearance of an international settlement."

The actress said she and Hayward have made preparations for a large family.

"In fact, we are completing a separate, though connected house expressly for the children. You see, we believe that children shouldn't be hampered by, and have their lives cluttered up with, doting parents and visitors. They're entitled to privacy, plenty of freedom and opportunity to pursue their childhood will and whims."

The Hayward juveniles' sanctuary is a replica of the once familiar red barn. It has a large playroom. Bedrooms are on the second story, off a balcony. Everything is in miniature, including bathroom facilities, and the house is complete, right down to the kitchen. It is supervised by a nurse.

"As the children grow, I expect the playroom will become a roller skating rink and eventually a ballroom," Miss Sullavan said.

"Living this way (the children will learn home responsibilities and privileges—privileges they would not find in the usual home. They also will enjoy certain rights of privacy not extended ordinarily in the home."

In the Hayward Nursery are Bill, 5 months old, and two daughters, Bridget, 2½, and Brooke, 4 years old.

Will her family interfere with Miss Sullivan's career? Some, probably, but if it does, the children will come first, she said.

"During the past four years I managed to make several pictures while bringing three babies into the world. If continuance of such a program demands that I make less frequent appearances, I am content to make fewer."

San Francisco Hotel Strike Set for Today

San Francisco, Aug. 29 (AP).—A strike against 28 San Francisco hotels will start at 4 p. m. tomorrow, a union announcement said, with picketing of four places.

The strike was called by the A. F. L. Culinary, Bar and Service Unions. It originally was set for last night.

Roosevelt Asks A 'Solid Block' War Building

President Roosevelt inspected the Arlington (Va.) site yesterday where he wants to build an Army office building of few windows.

He drove out in the late afternoon to the tract south of the Experimental Farm which had been reserved for a Quartermaster Depot and where the President wants to locate his own version of the Army "dream building."

In the morning, he told a press conference that he favored a solid block of a building, with windows only on the four outside walls where the employes would work mainly with artificial light and mechanically supplied fresh air.

Site Virtally Certain

This solid block design, eliminating interior shafts and courtyards was evidently the "compromise" that has been worked out between the President, who wants a building of moderate size, and Brig. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, Army construction chief, who has insisted on one big enough to house 40,000 people.

The President's visit to Arlington made it virtually certain that the building, no matter what its design will be built on the Quartermaster site instead of at the Virginia end of Memorial Bridge, where Somervell has demanded it should be.

At his press conference discussion the President did not appear completely "sold" on the windowless building, for he said he was mentioning it more or less as a trial balloon to gauge what reaction would be.

He pointed out that in the West a number of cities have built solid buildings where only the outside rooms get daylight.

Design Saves Money

This design saves money, giving more usable office space per square foot of building.

Most of the rooms would have to be artificially lighted, the President admitted.

As for the air, he observed that practically all the air in most large office buildings nowadays is brought in mechnically, anyhow.

As a further argument for his idea he said that a new type of artificial tube-lighting is better for the eyes than daylight, being more uniform in various parts of the room and not varying with the weather.

Several times the President repeated that a solid building would save money.

A final decision on the much-disputed project, for which Congress appropriated 35 million dollars, is expected soon.

Boy's Head Caught In Steering Wheel, He Goes Through

Detroit, Aug. 29 (AP).—The cat that got its head caught in the cream pitcher had nothing on a small boy left in an automobile on a parking lot.

Returning from a shopping trip, the boy's father found his son had poked his head through the steering spokes. The father couldn't free him. Neither could a policeman. They got a doctor whose only contribution was to suggest a mechanic to cut the steering wheel with a blow torch.

The mechanic had been working an hour, watched by a constantly growing crowd, when a spectator volunteered:

"If you can't pull his head back through the wheel, how about shoving him through? He's little." It worked.

Costa Ricans Next

San Jose, Costa Rica, Aug. 29 (AP). Germany today sent a note to Costa Rica asking the recall by September 1 of its consuls functioning in German-occupied countries.

Bloodhounds Hunt Escaped Prisoner At Fort Belvoir

Bloodhounds and a posse of soldiers are searching for a soldier who made his escape yesterday from a guard at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Private Steve P. Koss, 23, of Monessen, Pa., was being returned to the guardhouse at the camp after having recovered from an operation for appendicitis at the hospital. He was facing a court-martial for violation of the ninety-third article of war, which covers a wide variety of felonies.

Koss made his escape when the guard permitted him to go to a washroom alone. As the guard stood watch at the door, Koss jumped from a window. As the prisoner fled, the guard fired two shots in the air in an effort to stop him.

Red Troops Due In Teheran Today, Ankara Reports

London (Saturday), Aug. 30 (AP).—The Ankara radio quoted information from Teheran today to the effect that Red army formations were due to enter the Iranian capital during the morning.

Simla, India (Saturday), Aug. 30 (AP).—Germans in Iran will have difficulty escaping into Turkey since Soviet troops now hold the most important mountain roads leading there, a British military spokesman said today.

The Iranian population is mixing and trading eagerly with British troops following cessation of hostilities, he said, but emphasized that the troops were "taking no chances" during the interval of negotiations with the Teheran government. The advance to secure further oil fields will continue, he said.

One of the immediate British-Soviet aims is elimination of any Nazi Fifth-Column activity in Iran, he said.

"VENI, SANCTE SPIRITUS"
~ ~ ~ KING ROBERT II ~ ~ ~

Come, Thou Holy Spirit, come,
And from Thine eternal home
Shed the ray of light divine;
Come, Thou Father of the poor,
Come, Thou Source of all our store,
Come, within our bosoms shine.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

Few kings have left a better legacy to the Christian church than King Robert II who gave us this great hymn. We are told that he loved the service of chorister more than his kingly service, and often went to the Church, and in his royal robes with his crown on his head would direct the choir.

Bible Class Conference To Draw 400

More than 400 delegates—largest enrollment in conference history—will attend the twentieth annual District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Conference this weekend at Western Maryland College, Westminster.

They will come from 192 classes in 81 churches of eleven denominations for a combined vacation and spiritual retreat, and join in discussions on how to advance the Bible class work throughout the District, Maryland and Virginia. "The Word of God for Today's World" will be the conference theme.

As the conference opens today at 6 p. m. with a fellowship supper, Dr. Fred G. Holloway, Western Maryland College president, will bring greetings.

Association President Page McK. Etchison will preside over the opening worship session at 8 p. m., William R. Schmucker will lead group singing, and Mrs. Etchison will play the piano.

The National Hospital Service Society will present a Christian flag and an address will be delivered by Dr. Harold W. Tribble, theology professor at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky. Howard M. Stackhouse, of Emory Methodist Church, will be chairman of a social hour in the gymnasium of Blaphe Ward Hall at 9:30 p. m.

Sunday's features will be a Bible Class hour at 9:15 a. m., led by Association Vice President Elton H. Brown, sr.; a forum on "Building an Effective Bible Class" at 10:15 a. m., conducted by Association Executive Secretary George E. Harris; a worship service at 11:30 a. m., when Dr. Tribble will preach on "The Reconciling Word," and the annual meeting at 4 p. m. William E. Braithwaite, of National City Christian Church, will preside over a "Fireside Hour" at 9:30 p. m. Mrs. Etchison has arranged the program.

On the same campus, on the following weekend, the Columbia Federation of Baptist Young People's Unions will stage its Twelfth Annual Retreat under the theme of "We Will Be 'Soldiers of the Cross.'"

Manufacturer To Speak Tonight At Revival Here

R. G. LeTourneau, manufacturer of the largest excavating machinery in the world, and who attributes his success to giving nine-tenths of his income to the Lord's work, will speak tonight at 7:45 in a tent at Wisconsin Avenue and Calvert Street Northwest.

LE TOURNEAU

LeTourneau gave his story on Ripley's "Believe It Or Not" program on how God gave him the secret to the patent which has produced the mammoth machines sold over the world.

He has a 15 million dollar foundation in New York City known as the LeTourneau Foundation. He gives his money to such work as missions at home and abroad, Bible schools, summer camps for boys and girls and young people, Christian colleges and Bible conferences.

Beginning tomorrow night, Dr. James Rayburn, evangelist from Kansas, will be speaking every night until September 14.

Three Churches to Hold Union Rites Tomorrow

At 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Universalist National Memorial Church, All Souls' Unitarian and Mount Pleasant Congregational Churches will participate in a union service. The Rev. Joseph W. Beach, minister of the First Universalist Church, Worcester, Mass., will conduct the worship service and preach on "Our Unfinished Course." The National Capital Choir, under the direction of Miss Jesse Masters, will sing and H. Jerome Graham will be at the organ.

There will be Red Cross sewing on Friday from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m.

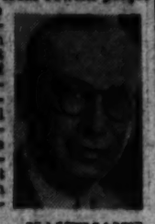
Members of the Self-Realization Fellowship and his many friends outside his own congregation are preparing to welcome the new Swami when he returns to his pulpit. The Swami Premananda has chosen for his subject on this occasion "The Youngest Monist of India."

Many D.C. Jews Will Attend Zionist Parley

Headed by National President Edmund I. Kaufmann and Rabbi Isadore Breslau, national executive secretary, many local Jewish people will attend the forty-fourth annual convention of the Zionist Organization of America, opening next Saturday at the Hotel Gibson, Cincinnati, Ohio. The national headquarters are at 1720 Sixteenth Street Northwest here.



KAUFMANN

Mr. Kaufmann is past president of the Washington Hebrew Congregation and now a member of its board. He heads the United Jewish Appeal here, is a member of the governing board of the Jewish Institute of Religion, and is affiliated with scores of other Jewish organizations. For many years he has been associated in Zionist and Jewish affairs with Dr. Stephen S. Wise and former Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandeis.

A graduate of the Union Law School, New York State College, as well as the Jewish Institute of Religion which is headed by Dr. Stephen S. Wise, Rabbi Breslau formerly occupied pulpits in New York, Waterbury, Conn., and Washington, D. C. He has been active in the Zionist movement since his early youth, receiving his first Zionist training at Zion Hall in Holyoke, Mass. in 1910-12. He was particularly active years ago in the old I. Z. A. He has been president of the Zionist District in Washington for the past six years, having been responsible for its growth into one of the largest Zionists units in the country. He is also chairman of the United Palestine Appeal of the Seaboard Region and cochairman of the United Jewish Appeal in Washington, D. C.

Church Women Busy Sewing And Knitting for Red Cross

By Robert Tate Allen
Post Church Editor

Throughout Washington's churches women's knitting needles are flying and sewing machines are humming in the interest of national defense, as Red Cross units turn out garments for home and abroad.

Among others, the congregation of Francis Asbury Methodist Church, 3146 Sixteenth, has sponsored sewing groups since April, 1940. Now the women meet Mondays from 1 to 3 p. m. and on Fridays from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. Because of Labor Day, they will gather next week on Tuesday.

Mrs. Paul Batzell is president of the Francis Asbury units, which at present are making baby quilts from the knitting is done at homes, with the women coming to the church to pick up the yarn. All the material comes through District Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church's Red Cross unit will meet in the social hall on Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. All interested women are invited to attend.

Singers from Shiloh Baptist Church, under the leadership of A. A. Banks, jr., religious education director, will sing spirituals at open-air vespers tomorrow at 6 p.m. at Walter Reed Hospital.

Several churches again have arranged weekend programs for service men.

Covenant - First Presbyterian Church will sponsor a supper and dance tonight at Fellowship House, 3563 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, will have "open house" in the parish hall beginning at 6 o'clock tonight. There will be "game night" there on Wednesday at 8 o'clock and "music night" on Friday at 8 o'clock.

The Foundry Forge youth group of Foundry Methodist Church has invited service men to an "open house" program on Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the Letts Building, Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest. Dancing, games and refreshments are scheduled.

Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church will have a program for selectees tonight from 8 to 10 o'clock at Mount Vernon Square, 900 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. Talkies and other features are planned.

Canon Chancellor Will Preach At Cathedral

The Rev. Theodore O. Wedel, canon chancellor and director, will be the preacher at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow at Washington Cathedral. The summer choir will sing the anthem, "Your Voices Raise," by G. F. Handel. E. William Brackett, organist and choirmaster of St. John's Episcopal Church, Georgetown, will be at the console of the great organ in the absence of Paul Callaway, cathedral organist and choirmaster.

At the 4 o'clock evensong service, Canon Curtis Draper, jr., will preach. The summer choir will be heard singing "Jesu! The Very Thought Is Sweet," by T. L. da Vittoria.

Holy Communion will be celebrated tomorrow at 7:30 and 9:30 a. m. Daily services will be conducted throughout the week at 7:30 a. m., 12 o'clock noon and 4 p. m.

Mr. Brackett also will substitute for Mr. Callaway on the cathedral music program broadcast tonight from Washington Cathedral over Station WINX at 8:05 o'clock.

'Old Song' Service

Officials of St. Paul's Methodist Church announced yesterday a special series of Sunday evening services will be launched on September 7, when the theme will be "The Old Songs Our Mother Used to Sing." The Rev. William Pierpont, pastor, will speak tomorrow at 11 a. m., on "The Toiler."

Cross-Channel Raids Cost 10 R. A. F. Planes

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 29.—The R. A. F. and the German Luftwaffe each lost ten planes today in new British offensive smashes at the German-occupied Low Countries and France, the air ministry announced tonight.

All losses were fighters except two of the Germans, which were bomber fighters, it said.

(D. N. B., German news agency, listed only nine British fighters downed and only one German. It said British bombers were escorted by many fighters.)

The air ministry gave no particulars on the day's raids, but issued accounts of spectacular raids on Thursday night on German territory.

At Duisburg great explosions and fires occurred among industrial buildings, with flames rising 500 feet, it reported.

The crew of one Sterling bomber said the antiaircraft fire was the worst they yet encountered. Caught by a searchlight, this plane was shelled for 15 minutes, then attacked by night fighters, but the pilot managed to run free and limp home.

The rear gunner of a Whitley said that when crossing the Dutch coast en route home, he saw an explosion in Duisburg, 100 miles away, which lit up the whole sky.

The crew of a Blenheim which with a fighter escort raided Rotterdam's docks at heights of 25 to 50 feet, returned with half the undercarriage shot away and the gunner and observer wounded.

These raiders were so low that even rifle fire was aimed at them, they said. (The German communique credited infantry with downing a British plane.)

Pilots of two Blenheims reported hitting a large ship in Maashaven, and another said his bombs started a fire amidship another vessel.

from his heart.

The surgeons decided upon the hazardous step after the 58-year-old politician had developed a temperature of 103.1, a possible sign that peritonitis was appearing close to vital organs.

Laval's journalistic associate, Marcel Deat, who was wounded simultaneously last Wednesday, was improving normally.

Laval and Deat were shot by a De Gaullist, youthful Paul Colette, who introduced himself, Trojan-horse fashion, into the ranks of an anti-Communist legion recruited to fight alongside Germans against Russia.

Laval was reported to have sent this message to authorities: "I request that Colette not be executed."

The Paris press continued to try to link Colette with Communists, but the police counterattack against oppositionists was turning more and more to the followers of Gen. Charles De Gaulle.

It was manifest that the authorities feared the anti-Communist legion was honeycombed with more De Gaullists.

Caen, Colette's home town, was reported running high tonight because Colette showed traces of a bloody beating, has been a center of numerous incidents attributed to British-De Gaullist action.

It was the scene of a recent killing of a police chief when a violator of the ban on celebration of Bastille Day, France's patriotic holiday, shot his way out of a police trap.

It is along the Normandy coast there that Marshal Petain once said whole boatloads of DeGaullist volunteers were leaving for England every day.

Colette himself had attempted such an escape. This was after he had served on the warship, Niger, which was sunk in the British evacuation of Dunkerque, been taken to England and then, in some unexplained manner, returned immediately to France.

Other odd facts of his background included his service as a sailor on the now famous French ship, Massilia, which transported former Premier Edouard Daladier and other prominent French leaders to North Africa in an effort to escape the French debacle of June, 1940.

It also was disclosed that he formerly was a member of Col. Francois de Le Rocque's fascist party, the Croix de Feu, but his parents said he had shown no interest in politics lately.

King Cremated And Enshrined In Cambodia

By the Associated Press

Pnom Penh, Cambodia, French Indo-China, Aug. 29.—In the weird rites of a lost empire the body of the king of Cambodia was cremated and enshrined today. The monarch, Prea Bat Samdach Prea Sisowath Monivong, died last April 23.

Since then the body has been encased in a semicircular urn, thus simulating the position of an unborn child and signifying preparation for rebirth. Mysterious secret essences, which destroyed all internal organs except the heart and the brain without injuring the outer flesh, preserved the corpse.

Three days ago priests removed the body and washed and attired it in royal robes, hung the medal of the order of "the million elephants and the white parasol" over the heart and then placed it in a large, barrel-like jar.

A funeral cortege accompanied by thousands of yellow-robed priests passed slowly through the streets of this ancient capital to a newly-built pagoda about as high as a four-story building. A catafalque glittering with gold and silver jewels was erected inside. Long white damask drapes sprinkled wih gold symbols formed a canopy over it.

The new king, a handsome youth attired in heavy gold-encrusted robes, lighted a funeral pyre as strange, plaintive music welled out. Princes and rulers of other Indo-China states in shimmering robes of purple and white and saffron and crimson, hung with jewels, paid obeisance. Governor-general Admiral Jean Decoux and a Japanese general represented foreign authority.

The last action in the complicated ceremony came when a band of tattered and savage-looking convicts were brought before the new king and given amnesty.

Viipuri Fires Seen for Miles, Finns Report

Helsinki, Aug. 29.—Tonight's only news from the Karelian front is that the city of Viipuri is burning. Big fires can be seen as far as Wilmanstrand, some 40 miles from Viipuri on the new frontier with Russia, long ago passed by the Finnish troops who are now almost everywhere nearing the prewinter war border.

The fall of Tallinn, the Estonian capital, just across the Gulf of Finland, has aroused lively interest, as Tallinn was to the Finns a favorite tourist spot. As mentioned in the German communiques and confirmed by eye witnesses arriving here, the city has been damaged. The quarters around the harbor and the railway stations are totally destroyed.

With the greatest satisfaction, however, it is learned that the historic center of the city has been spared. This picuresque, medieval part of Tallinn apparently has survived bombardment as well as immense fires which were to be seen even from this city last night.

After the fall of Tallinn and Baltic port the Russians tried to evacuate some of their troops from the harbor of Tallinn. It is revealed here that this effort met with disaster. Ten thousand Russian soldiers perished when the transport ships were sunk by bombardment from German artillery and tanks.

'Dive Bomber' a Tribute To the 'Flying Surgeons'

New Technicolor Film at the Earle Reveals Heroism of Little-Known Branch of Service; Gus Van Headlines Brief Revue on Stage

"DIVE BOMBER." Warner Brothers Technicolor picturization of a screen play by Frank Wead and Robert Buckner, costarring Errol Flynn and Fred MacMurray, with Ralph Bellamy, Robert Armstrong, Regis Toomey, Allen Jenkins, Craig Stevens, Herbert Anderson, Moroni Olsen, Louis Jean Heydt, Cliff Nazarro, Alexis Smith and Dennie Moore. Directed by Michael Curtiz. At the Earle Theater.

Save for its heavy accent on the researches and achievements of the "flying surgeons," comprising the medical branch of Navy aviation, and its effective employment of Technicolor photography, "Dive Bomber," the Warner Brothers' new feature on the screen at the Earle Theater, closely follows the formula of an uncounted number of service films that have preceded it to public view.

FRED MacMURRAY

It is a highly technical subject that Commander Frank Wead and Robert Buckner have fashioned from an original story by the former. There is as much laboratory and clinical work woven into its action as there is amateur and expert flying, which is an exceedingly tremendous lot. Love interest and romantic developments are entirely lacking from the "plot," which concentrates with excessive energy upon the scientific developments and improved medical practices employed by the medical corps to keep the Navy fliers in the air at tremendous altitudes and under killing conditions. What it amounts to is the story of naval aviation's "human guinea pigs." As such, it is a picture of detailed and minute perfection, as far as the layman is able to judge.

Such "conflict" as is introduced is predicated upon the familiar premise of the natural rivalries between veteran and fledgling fliers and the cocksureness of a young surgeon who has not yet sprouted his wings. These major antagonisms are gradually composed to a point where their principals are able to work out the most valuable safeguards to the life and well-being of the men whose god is altitude and mission a sacrificial patriotism. In certain of its sequences, "Dive Bomber" generates an enormous degree of interest and suspense, but these intervals are punctuated by others of laboratory and machine shop experimentation that slow the action down to ground speed.

Authentic to Lay Eyes

There can be no dispute over the film's authenticity. Made with the full cooperation of the United States Navy, it expresses a complete willingness to sacrifice conventional "drama" to an accurate depiction of a little known aspect of Navy flying and the lives of the men who have aided in raising the United States air forces to a higher level of physical security than those of any other nation. Although turning a cold shoulder to romance, in the usual sense, the producers have found it possible to leaven their scientific treatise with an occasional dash of comedy, some of it forced in by higher pressure than the pneumatic suits the aviators wear up in the stratosphere. To those curious as to the inner workings of the winged branches of national defense, "Dive Bomber" will prove the most enlightening exhibit any studio has turned out to date.

And there can be no quarrel in the matter of casting. Errol Flynn and Fred MacMurray, as the smart aleck young doctor and the seasoned airman, respectively, have roles made to order for their abilities and Ralph Bellamy is particularly well cast as the chief of the medical corps, already grounded by the hazards of his submission to the rigid tests of his own experiments. Regis Toomey, Robert Armstrong, Louis Jean Heydt, Craig Stephens, Moroni Olsen, Russell Hicks, and Herbert Anderson are among others whose work is valuable to the purposes of the picture. Two feminine roles of minor importance are effectively played by Alexis Smith and Dennie Moore. Such comedy as there is is in the hands of Allen Jenkins and Cliff "Double Talk" Nazarro, aided now and again by Miss Moore's verbal flipperies.

"V" Is for Victory on the Stage

The brief stage bill at the Earle this week is compact and colorful, with Gus Van as headliner. It is introduced by the Roxyettes in their long-heralded "V" routine, which turns out to be a cleverly devised tap number with the symbolic "V" outlined by red fringe on the sleeves of the white jackets and with blue hats completing the patriotic motif. Come then The Three Arnolds—two men and a girl—in some especially intricate gymnastics and so to the veteran Mr. Van. The surviving member of the famous team of Van and Schenck still has one of the best voices for character songs extant on the boards and retains all of the versatility that always has marked his work. The Roxyettes furnish the final filip.

Adding still another touch of variety to the bill are Diane Christenberry and Gene Archer, contributing brief vocal interludes from the orchestra pit. But "Dive Bomber," of course, is the thing. If not a fictional sop to the romanticists, it is, at least, a factual recital of immense timeliness.

Pitching Woo at Mr. Woo-Woo!

HUGH HERBERT

who seems to be becoming the great wooer, as well as the star whose comedy trademark is the treble "woo-woo." All ready to "save me child" as chief of the fire department, Mr. Herbert here is being coquetted by a bevy of beauties, who probably remember that when not fighting the flames he is a bartender, in Universal's "Badlands of Dakota"

'The Smiling Ghost,' at the Met, Is Truly a Frightful Picture!

By Richard L. Coe

"THE SMILING GHOST." Warner Brothers picturization, with Wayne Morris, Brenda Marshall, Alexis Smith, Alan Hale, Lee Patrick, David Bruce, Helen Westley, Willie Best and Charles Halton. Directed by Lewis Seiler. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

Even though spooks don't scare you one whit, avoid "The Smiling Ghost" at the Metropolitan and don't say you weren't warned. Until yesterday we thought pictures like this one went out with silence. It's as tasteless a variation on the sliding panel-creeping hand technique as even a moron can imagine.

Just what Warners have against Wayne Morris, Brenda Marshall, Willie Best and Helen Westley by putting them in such a mess, we wouldn't know. After all, they're nice people and even if Morris isn't a great actor, he's certainly far more capable than this yarn would suggest.

Most objectionable single item in this thoroughly objectionable "entertainment" is an effort to make the kiddies scream by taking them into a tomb at night, prying among the coffins and locating a chap who doesn't seem to be dead after all these years. Those who found portions of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" a bit too much for their youngsters would really get a shock from "The Smiling Ghost." The pathetic thing about such a film is that it obviously was created for nonadult audiences, exactly the sort of people who shouldn't be cluttered with such stuff.

In brief, it concerns an unhappy heiress, "The Kiss of Death Girl" the tabs call her. Seems that every time she's about to marry a chap he meets some dire end. So her doting grandma, played, inexplicably enough, by the Theater Guild's Helen Westley, hires a strapping young fellow (Wayne Morris) to be her apparent fiance and thus smoke out the mystery. With the help of a soothing sob-sister, played by a rather dazed Brenda Marshall, he—oh, well, what's the use?

The scripting is terrible—the trade magazines keep the duo's identity dark, though the cast sheet does give a glimmer of credit (?). There is practically nothing the actors can do to put any credence into any of the situations. Alan Hale turns up as butler. Charles Halton plays a little old man who collects heads. Willie Best, who probably comes as near to being "amusing" as anyone in the cast, has a "Boogie-Woogie" head that commands attention. Alexis Smith, Warners' new glamorous girl who has a better part, one trusts, in "Dive Bomber" at the Earle, is the distressed heiress.

Also at the Metropolitan is a comedy short with Henny Youngman that is as bad as the feature film. There's a Sportscope on roller skating that may give you some exercise ideas and the newsreel has some genuinely moving shots of Prime Minister Churchill's return voyage to England.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Africa, Here We Come!

Hollywood, Aug. 29 (INS).—The friendship of Gary Cooper and Ernest Hemingway has resulted in one of the most interesting deals ever made in Hollywood. Sam Goldwyn, Howard Hawks, Victor Fleming, Gary and Hemingway have joined forces to produce a movie on a cooperative basis—Goldwyn's part being to act as producer; Hemingway to contribute "The Short but Happy Life of Francis Macomber"—his own story; Howard Hawks and Victor Fleming to share equally in the directorial assignment and of course Gary to star.

GARY COOPER

The movie has an African locale and knowing Gary I'm sure he couldn't be happier than to have this opportunity to make a picture in Africa. He was there five years ago on a hunting trip that he still enjoys talking about. Sam Goldwyn's picture, "The Little Foxes," is breaking all records in the Music Hall in New York, so he isn't afraid to attempt anything under the sun. War or no war, this movie will be made.

Have just called to the telephone by Moe J. Siegel, head man at Republic Studios, who says I'm not the only one who's proud of my daughter Harriet. Siegel says that Parsons, jr. has turned in one of the most original story ideas he has seen in years, that it will be her first feature production and will star Republic's tomboiseuse, Judy Canova. Jack Townley, who has either written or collaborated on all the Canova comedies, has been assigned to develop "Mattie Harrigan," tentative title. Quoting Republic's boss: "The story is about a Milly Mott Hari and is so original that if you don't laugh, there's something wrong with your funny bone."

Lucky break for Bruce Cabot when Joe Pasternak changed him from a "menace" to a colorful leading man in "Flame of New Orleans." Bruce did such a good job and was so likable as Marlene Dietrich's boy friend that Walter Wanger signed him for "Sundown." "Sundown" is finished and so Bruce moves to Warners to make love to Constance Bennett in "Wild Bill Hickok." Bruce plays the title role and it's an adventurous, exciting part. Warren William, one of our better villains in the movies, because you always like him no matter how wicked his role, is featured and so is Roland Drew. Director Ray Enright will call the roll any day now.

Universal appreciates Gregory La Cava, as well they might after "Unfinished Business," and so they are building a new bungalow for him—a cozy place where he can do his cuff-writing. Greg has another little idea on the cuff which should help Carole Lombard, who has had a succession of rather bad pictures.

Welles' 'Citizen Kane' Returns To Keith's at Popular Prices

"CITIZEN KANE." RKO-Radio release of the screen play produced and directed by Orson Welles from a script by Mr. Welles and Herman J. Mankiewicz, starring Mr. Welles, with Joseph Cotten, Dorothy Comingore, Everett Sloane, Ray Collins, George Coulouris, Agnes Moorehead, Paul Stewart, Ruth Warwick, Erskine Sanford, William Alland, Fortunio Bonanova, Gus Schilling, Philip Van Zandt, Georgia Backus, Harry Shannon and Sonny Papp. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

After Orson Welles nearly scared the life out of hordes of innocent American citizens with his radio "Men From Mars," he leaped into the movies intent upon creating one of those unfabulous modern beings who are surrounded with the aura of the fabulous—a multimillionaire publisher with fingers deep in the pies of industry and politics.

"Citizen Kane" is the result. It is a picture, the like of which has never been produced before. Whether you like the amazing Master Welles or not, you will reel before the photographic and psychopathic angles revealed in "Citizen Kane."

Avidity is the keynote of Kane's life. He is avid for material things, hungry for affection, thirsty for flattery. His appetite for power approaches megalomania. Also, he likes to do good—but the subjects of his "do-gooding" had better be good, or he'll break 'em. He's highly intelligent, but all his intelligence is focused upon aggrandizing his great hero—himself. And he wonders why no one can really stand him in the long run, neither his oldest friends, his mistress nor his wife.

Great Variety of Incident

The story of this modern Kubla Khan swings up with deliberate power through a mighty welter of tremendous, petty, exciting and merely despicable incidents. You see his character jell and then unconsciously become adamant. You see his tremendous business initiative and vision. You see him browbeating his associates. You hear him cursing like Satan when he's blackmailed out of his political position. You see him driving his luckless mistress to become a prima donna, even though she has no voice, so that he may pose as a sort of modern Medici and patron of the arts. But as he lies on his death bed, you feel he's still essentially the same unpleasant small boy who banged a visitor in the stomach with his sled.

While beauteous Dorothy Comingore seems to have achieved stardom because of her work in "Citizen Kane," the picture belongs to Orson Welles—overwhelmingly. His conception, direction and acting are the trademark of the production, despite fine acting by every member of the cast and the monumental photography of Gregg Toland.

Much fascination inheres in the physical settings. Especially in the grandiose and beturreted castle in which Kane houses and expresses his tragedy. Also the be-gimcracked boudoir of Dorothy Comingore which he smashes up when she leaves. (Here's one spot where Mr. Welles descends to being Hollywoodish.) Overpowering, too, is the godawful collection of works of art, expensive trash and mere whatnots, which he accumulates after the manner of an enterprising and all-powerful jackdaw.

To omit seeing "Citizen Kane" would be to cheat yourself out of beholding one of the weirdest and perhaps greatest phenomena created on celluloid.

As an antidote to the powerful cinema dose of "Citizen Kane," the Keith management has thoughtfully provided Walt Disney's newest, "The Baggage Smashers." It shows Goofy entangled with a magician's luggage. Which makes us think—whatever would happen if Orson Welles and Walt Disney should become coproducers. The millennium, no doubt.

MARY HARRIS.

LEONARD LYONS, whose Broadway column appears regularly on this page, is on vacation until September 1. His pithy paragraphs will be resumed here on that date.

HEDDA HOPPER

Still Taking It on the Chin!

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 29.—There's an old saying that you can get used to hanging if you hang long enough, and maybe it's true, 'cause after two years of steady insults as Nurse Preen to "The Man Who Came to Dinner" Mary Wickes announces that she's grown to love it, and thinks people should insult each other more frequently.

MARTHA RAYE

Mary says we're all much too polite, and it makes softies of us. She thinks a judicious use of rudeness in the daily diet would toughen up our egos and keep us from taking ourselves too seriously. Oh, dear! But wasn't there a famous Frenchman who said, "We welcome the candor of our friends, but we can never be sufficiently grateful for the hypocrisy of our enemies!" Well, right or wrong, Mary's over at Warners taking it on the chin from Monty Woolley, and perky as all get-out about it!

A sneak preview of Fred Astaire's latest, "You'll Never Get Rich," with Rita Hayworth, marks up another bull's-eye for Columbia. In September, Fred starts a costarrer with Bing Crosby, at Paramount, but after seeing the new Astaire-Hayworth setup, Columbia executives are arranging for more of the same.

Kay Kyser's had to eat his words on that "one picture a year" policy. He'll begin his next January 1, after a series of p. a.'s at some Army camps and theaters back East. Kay's all excited over his songbird Ginny Simms' film debut, even though it has spelled the beginning of the end for their professional tie-up. But that's the kind of a guy the ole professor is, and he's as proud of her acting as "Playmates" as if he were her agent.

Martha Raye, whose next will be "Keep 'em Flying," with Abbott and Costello, is being paged by Warners for an Army picture. If she makes it, she'll have covered the field—Army, Navy, and Air Corps. Oops! I almost forgot, the Marines!

Martha hasn't yet recovered from her accident, but she's at work in "Hellzapoppin" in a wheel chair. Studio props have designed an invisible support to brace her when she stands for her singing scenes. That's what I call spunk, and over on the set they're calling her "the old trouper."

When Mary Maguire, the English girl, who was under contract here to Twentieth Century, reutrned home months ago, she seemed to vanish into thin air and there's been much speculation as to her fate. So Miles Mander would like her friends to know he's just had a letter from Mary's father stating that she's very much alive, has a brand new son and is working in an English production, "Banana Ridge," and turning her salary back to the government. Mary's husband, the wealthy young Robert Gordon Conning, who joined up at the beginning of the war, is imprisoned somewhere on the continent.

Remember last winter when I told you about Marlene Dietrich having picked that wonderful colored dancer from the Huntington Hotel for a part in her new picture? Well, he's the Bob Evans who's been wowing them over at Rhum-Boogie with his "Sophistication in Bronze" routine, and now RKO have signed him up for a feature spot in "Syncopation . . . Anna Lee spends September and October at Lake Louise working on a novel of pre-war England. Her husband, Robert Stevenson, remains in Hollywood to direct "Passage from Bordeaux."

by Soviet guns, and the "enemy, seeking escape from the flames, discarded arms and equipment," the Russian high command said.

Budynny's armies struggling to stem the Nazi sweep into the eastern Ukraine threw up a new defense line behind raging flood waters they had loosed in the lower Dneiper River.

In the fierce battle around the otherwise unidentified town of "K" on the Ukrainian front the Germans were said to have left 600 dead and wounded on the battlefield, many of them annihilated by Russian mortars.

In the daylight hours the Germans unleashed three attacks, each of which was hurled back with heavy losses, and during the night rushed up reserves which were thrown into a dawn attack spearheaded by 40 tanks, it was stated.

Of the 40 tanks only 23 succeeded in reaching the Russian advanced lines, it was said, and the others were destroyed by anti-tank guns and land mines.

The 279th German infantry regiment, which participated in the attack, was said to have retreated in disorder after losing at least half its men.

Russian artillery kept up a steady pounding of the German rear to prevent the Nazis from reorganizing for another assault, the high command's communique said.

division headquarters. Each division will be given a release quota for the remainder of 1941, to be discharged in accordance with the priorities list.

Except for dependency and hardship cases, no soldier will be released while his unit is on maneuvers or undergoing special training. Men will not be promised release on a given date.

Releases from some units may run as high as 30 per cent of authorized strength in one month, the department stated, while other forces may be limited to a maximum of 4 per cent a month.

The 1941 releases are scheduled for completion by December 10 in order to enable men to reach their homes before the Christmas holidays.

Selectees, released from service, will be given a physical examination and transferred to the Enlisted Reserve Corps, in which they are enrolled for 10 years. Men are permitted to take home one complete uniform and are given five cents a mile travel expenses from the point of discharge to the location of their local draft board.

New selectees will be called up this fall to replace the men who have been released, the department stated, so there will be no decline in Army strength. The department yesterday announced the strength of the Army as 1,578,400 officers and men, of whom 697,000 were selectees.

Dependency and hardship case investigations for the Army are expected to increase 25 per cent this fall, the American Red Cross stated yesterday.

3700 Promotions Due for Officers

Temporary promotions will be given to about 3700 regular Army and Reserve officers under the new policy designed to remove inequalities in the rate of advancement in these two Army components, the War Department announced yesterday.

Temporary promotions for Reserve officers will be chiefly to the ranks of first lieutenant and captain, the department said, while temporary promotion will be open to regular Army majors with 22 years' service, captains with 12 years' service, first lieutenants with three years and second lieutenants with one year.

ted in part to a shortage of overseas maintenance personnel familiar with American aircraft and spare parts.

"Second in importance only to the actual manufacture and delivery of the aircraft needed to support the democratic defense against aggression," the statement noted, "is the maintenance and supply of such aircraft once it has reached the war zone."

American aircraft experts now on duty on the British, Near Eastern and African fronts will meet Gen. Brett and his staff at various points along the route of his tour, which was not disclosed.

In discussing Harriman's mission to Moscow, the President told reporters that John D. Biggers, who was OPM'S production chief until Thursday's Defense Administration shake-up, would take over Harriman's London duties while the latter was in Russia.

The effect of Biggers' transfer is to give the Administration two lend-lease expediters at the front, Mr. Roosevelt said. The London post is so exceedingly important, the President explained, that it ought to be filled at all times.

Harriman was originally sent over to Britain to deal chiefly with the maritime end of lend-lease, the President continued, but the job enlarged itself to take in the general production field.

Cost Of Storage

The bill vetoed by the President providing for the freezing of Government-owned cotton and wheat stocks has properly been denounced as a measure designed to boost prices by removing surpluses just as the time was approaching when some sales might have been made to advantage. But few people stop to consider what would be the actual direct cost of storing indefinitely—as the farm bloc wished—over six million bales of cotton or about 170 million bushels of wheat. These stored commodities take up space that might be utilized for other purposes, tie up capital invested in warehouse facilities, and, of course, pile up charges for storage, insurance and handling.

All these extra charges have to be taken into account in computing losses (or gains) to the Government from sales of its stored stocks. And they also figure in the calculations of farmers trying to decide whether to pay off their debts to the CCC and claim produce stored for them under loan agreements. In case of cotton, for example, storage rates paid by the Government amount to 15 cents per bale each month for the first year, and 12½ cents monthly thereafter. That is a good deal lower than used to be customary, because it is cheaper to store large amounts of cotton for long periods of time than to handle small amounts that move out rapidly for sale. Even so, the bill for storing over six million bales of cotton for a year runs to about $10,800,000 in the first year and nine million in the second year.

In case of wheat, storage and insurance charges are estimated to amount to about 9 cents per bushel per year—likewise a sizable sum, especially if the charge runs for a succession of years, with the Government's own stocks at record levels (although it has held more wheat under loan agreements). However, the millions paid out yearly for storage of surplus farm products mean little to a Congress bent on voting billions for farm relief. It is simply interesting to reflect occasionally on the incidental costs of our price-boosting experiments.

Overture, 1941

The reports last week that the retreating Russians in the Ukrainian sector had blown up the great Dnieper River dam have now been officially confirmed at Moscow. Thus the last lingering doubt as to the sincerity and intensity of the Russian war policy is dispelled. To Soviet Russia Dnieprostroy, proudest monument to the grandiose five-year plans, was in its own way as hallowed as the holy city of Moscow with its palaces, cathedrals, churches and bells was to the Russia of Tsar Alexander I. Except for Boulder Dam, Dnieprostroy was the greatest hydroelectric plant in all the world. It required five years to build at a vast cost in money, effort, and economic dislocation. The dam had a special interest for America because the plans and construction were in charge of specially imported American engineers, headed by Col. Hugh L. Cooper, the builder of Muscle Shoals.

Dnieprostroy had a capacity of 750,000 horsepower or 558,000 kilowatts. It provided motive power and light to an area of 70,000 square miles containing a population of 16 million and many important industries. One can understand what splendor and beauty these figures held for the Bolshevik imagination only by remembering the utterly materialistic basis of communism and the devout but not entirely successful purpose of the Soviet leaders to transform the most economically primitive society of Europe into the most advanced industrial society on earth. It seemed to usher a hitherto backward country into the electric age. A few months after the completion of Dnieprostroy, Comrade Kuibayshev, head of the state planning commission, could boast at any rate, to a plenum of the central control committees of the party that "as a result of the five-year plan electricity has entered permanently into our life."

Thus we may see what the sacrifice of Dnieprostroy means to Russia. The fateful order, it is said, was given to Marshal Budyenny by Comrade Stalin himself. And at Stalin's direction, whatever portions of machinery could not be removed were wrecked beyond any possibility of repair. Moreover, it is said, a wide section of the most productive area in Russia is so damaged by the inundation that it can be reclaimed, if at all, only by years of effort.

Whatever may be the truth of all this, one thing is now plain: there will be no Russian surrender. The bitter resistance thus far offered has not been offered in any hope of purchasing more favorable terms of capitulation later. What the Russians have done to Dnieprostroy they are prepared to do everywhere else—to ruin, as far as lies in their power, every Russian village, every verst of Russian land that must be yielded to the invader. It is plain that the campaign that our experts said would have been ended a fortnight ago has only begun.

War On Crime

Washington's struggle to counteract a long-sustained crime wave has suddenly taken a most optimistic turn. Jarvis Catoe's confessions to the police and substantiating evidence in the hands of officers point to the solution of seven murders and seven criminal assaults on Washington women in the last two years. It was the wrist watch of one victim pawned in New York which led to the arrest of Catoe. Rejoicing over the apparent solution of so many heinous crimes must also be heightened that it was one man who was responsible for them. True, it is astonishing that one man could pile up such an appalling record before being caught. For the moment, however, this sobering thought is overshadowed by the fact that our law-enforcement machinery appears to have brought to an end an atrocious series of crimes.

This good news, moreover, follows close on the heels of the Police Department reorganization. The promotion of Capt. Harvey G. Callahan to be an inspector is particularly a good sign. Inspector Callahan had been critical of the police in the recent House investigation. His courageous testimony may have irked some members of the force, but its candor and sincerity marked him as an alert officer who has the public welfare at heart. His promotion is an encouraging indication that Maj. Kelly and the Board of Commissioners intend to select the department's most competent men for positions of trust.

Inspector Richard H. Mansfield appears also to be the right man to bring the Detective Bureau out of the doldrums. He is well trained in the art of running down criminals who strike and leave little evidence behind. Because of the weakness of the department's detective work in recent years, however, his responsibility will be much greater than any he has previously assumed. One of the most hopeful developments growing out of this shake-up is the establishment of a detective training school under Capt. John Fowler, a ballistics expert who got his background of training at the Police School of Northwestern University. If advancement to the rank of lieutenant is made contingent upon graduation from the new school, as recommended by the Commissioners' board of inquiry, a marked improvement in detective work may be anticipated.

Commissioner Young and Maj. Kelly appear to be working in close harmony in bringing about these hopeful changes. There are indications, moreover, that most of the constructive suggestions made by the special board of inquiry and the House investigating committee will be approved by the Commissioners. A good start toward regeneration of the Police Department is thus being made, and the shake-up is already bearing fruit.

Irrupting France

When the men of Vichy decided 14 months ago to abandon the struggle against Germany, they hoped in that way to restore peace to France, though at the expense of France's honor. What they actually succeeded in doing was to tie that nation to Hitler's chariot and produce something resembling a latent state of civil war. What was latent last year is rapidly becoming active today. Indications of this have been multiplying during recent weeks and this week took the form of an attempted assassination at Versailles of Pierre Laval and Marcel Deat. Laval has for years been an outspoken appeaser of the totalitarian powers, and during his tenure as vice premier sought to bring about wholehearted and complete "collaboration" between France and Germany. Deat, a one-time Socialist, reached the appeasement route via a perfervid pacifism. He was the originator of the ironic slogan: "Die for Danzig?" He did not want France to fight Germany when the latter attacked Poland. However, when the British and Free French moved into Syria, this pacifist was heartily in favor of military resistance. Thus while the path he took to reach acceptance of the "new order" differed from Laval's, both ultimately found themselves in the same camp, and both are bitterly detested by Frenchmen jealous of their nation's honor and independence. The attempts at assassination of the duo may be an isolated act, but it looks as if it is part of a general awakening.

Nondefense Savings

At the instigation of the indefatigable Senator Byrd the Senate Finance Committee has voted to ask the Bureau of the Budget to indicate how savings in nondefense outlays of from one billion to two billion dollars could be effected. Another proposal, likewise sponsored by Senator Byrd and approved by the Finance Committee, calls for the creation of a special committee on which members of both the spending and taxing committees of House and Senate would be represented, as well as the Secretary of the Treasury and the Director of the Budget. This latter proposal has been urged repeatedly, and the Senate acted favorably upon a similar resolution last year. However, certain members of the House object to the proposal, allegedly because it might impair their constitutional right to initiate bills for raising revenue. That appears to be a very unconvincing reason, since the object is simply to provide for better coordination of the spending and taxation programs. If Congressional committees appropriating funds were brought into closer touch with those that have to find revenue, there would be much less excuse for failure to cut out nonessential expenditures. Senator Byrd's proposal would not only make for more systematic procedure; it would enable Congressmen to point to the record as a reason for refusing to yield to spending pressure.

Down Under

In this country the political, if not the personal, side of Mr. Menzies' resignation as Prime Minister of Australia will be easily understood. Australians were reluctant to have their Prime Minister leave the country for any length of time. And this is what had been planned, apparently. Mr. Menzies, it is understood, was about to depart for London as the Australian member of the Empire War Council. The murmuring that arose in Australia had nothing to do with the question of Australian participation in the war effort. Australian zeal is as ardent as ever. Indeed, it was felt that a Prime Minister on the job at home was necessary to Australia's maximum contribution. This construction of the news is strengthened by the knowledge that Mr. Menzies' successor, Mr. A. W. Fadden, is as prowar as Mr. Menzies himself, and, in fact, acted as premier during Mr. Menzies' last absence.

Whether Mr. Menzies will leave for London now that he has resigned seems to be in some doubt. It is to be hoped that he will go. Mr. Menzies has a stature independent of title, and that stature has grown under war responsibilities in a measure which recalls the growth of Gen. Smuts in World War I. His worth sprang to American eyes during his recent American visit. In fact, the former Australian Prime Minister proved to be almost an "interpreter's house" in himself between the British Commonwealth and the United States. He belongs to the world's public life.

CCC Benefits

It is heartening to hear that a national unity asset has been developed by the CCC. Last year nearly 60,000 left the rolls to take civilian jobs, many of them defense jobs, and about 15,000 entered the armed services. Immediate benefits to the Nation at large may be seen in CCC's provision of a large group of vocationally trained men for industry at a time when industry needs such men, and in the infusion into both the draft and regular forces of men conditioned to the temperament of service routine. The easy absorption of thousands into employment, most of whom had little beyond grade school education before entering the CCC, affirms the quality of CCC training in fitting for independence unemployed youths whose chief claim to dependency had been the lack of education and physical stamina necessary satisfactorily to hold down jobs.

TOMBSTONE IN THE FIELD

The plowshare strikes a sudden spark.
With yarrow and ragweed overgrown,
The plowman pauses there to mark,
An epitaph upon a stone.

The plowhorse nibbles the turf nearby.
The blackbirds over the furrows fly.
The plowman ponders, the plowman reads,
An old inscription in the weeds.

Some antique date the markings show.
The name is lost. He does not know
What nameless plowman lies asleep
Upon this field a fathom deep.

What thoughts were his, what words he said,
Are unimportant. He is dead.
His part upon the earth is now
A stubborn stone that stops a plow.

A stubborn stone, it must abide.
The plow, the plowman, turn aside.
With every crop these furrows yield
Will be that tombstone in the field.

Shooting Heritage

The doctrine of the isolationists seems to be that of the man who prayed:

"God bless me and my wife
"My son John and his wife—
"Us four
"And no more. Amen."

They talk about warmongers as something to be feared or exterminated from the earth. But as far back as I can trace American history, this country has never been afraid of war when it was in a just cause. American men have not been cowards or afraid to spill their blood if they believed in the cause they fought for. We were aliens to this country when we took it from the Indians. We didn't go back to England and say we couldn't spill our blood on foreign soil. We fought in Canada in the French and Indian wars. All of the great Northwest was foreign soil to George Rogers Clark and his followers. Were they afraid of spilling their blood? Were the thousands of white men who spilt their blood for the freedom of the black man afraid of spilling their blood in a just cause? Were we afraid of spilling blood on foreign soil when we fought the Spanish-American War? Were we afraid of a little blood spilling in the Boxer War, or the Philippine Insurrection or the Mexican War or the last World War?

America has never been afraid to shoot. We gained our country by shooting—not by making speeches about warmongers and keeping the country out of war. What is the life of a coward worth to this or any other country?

Instead of growling and griping about our boys being drafted, we should teach them that it is a privilege to be allowed to fight for the freedom of mankind and that they should be trained and ready to fight as men when they are called. They are contributing of their manhood to the cause of freedom to mankind. Not for the United States; for all the world, wherever slavery is found, it should be exterminated by every red-blooded man in every country. KENTUCKIAN.

Washington, Aug. 27.

Isolationist Illusion

Dr. MacCracken's speech at the America First rally last Wednesday night illustrates clearly the fundamental illusions of the isolationists. He condemned having America committed to the destruction of Nazi tyranny, because he said that would mean war for us. But he reveals his mental blind spot in not realizing that failure to destroy Nazi tyranny in the present struggle will necessarily mean war for us at the time and under the circumstances when it best suits the interest, convenience and military power of the totalitarian dictators.

The whole world is smaller today because of the improvement in transportation and communication than was the United States in Lincoln's day. No more than this country could live half slave and half free can the world live partly under peace-loving democracies and partly under dictatorships, hardened to military aggression, where the desire for peace of the common man is stifled.

ALFRED BAKER LEWIS.

New York, N. Y., Aug. 26.

Nazi Peace

No doubt a flood of abuse will be heaped on President Roosevelt's head for his saying that this Nation doesn't yet realize the seriousness of the war and that it has one to win, and his remarks on the idea of a peace now which would be only an armed peace for the Nazis—giving them their victories without having to fight further for them and get ready for the Western Hemisphere.

But those who are going to attack the President anew had better stop and think first! Munich bought peace—for a year, and then Czecho-Slovakia was gone. The Russo-German Pact in 1939 brought neutrality for a while and then Russia was attacked. H. CABOT.

Unity Or Defeat

Cold, sober judgment tells me that business has come across in this national crisis better than any other section of the general public. Whenever concrete demands have been made upon them, I, whilst holding not an atom of brief for business, feel that they have placed duty before profit.

It is customary these days to tell labor that they have done a fine job; so far as national defense is concerned, that is hypocrisy of the first order. Labor has let us down more than any other section of the people. They have tragically failed to realize that in the face of our common national danger, the situation called for giving—not driving unyieldingly, hard bargains. Without jeopardizing their present status one iota, business differences and social advancement should have been laid aside temporarily. In the event of a totalitarian victory, labor stands to lose perhaps more than any other section of our people and yet to date, they have blocked production, our only means of defense. Mr. Hitler indeed owes them a debt of gratitude. Labor, unknowingly is digging its own grave!

This Nation is united on one point. Everyone realizes that we are in the war. However, all too many think that someone else is going to fight our battle. Apathy, "wishful thinking," "let George do it," and "politics before patriotism," refusing to put first things first, have denied our President our solid backing which is suicidal for us to withhold. We have got to realize quickly that the future existence of our country lies in the balance today.

The Nation has got to unite and give its full, undivided support to those whom it elected to guide us through this crucial, national danger, or go down to defeat as surely and as completely as have so many other nations before our very eyes. We shall either do this now or live to see the self-appointed "master race" tear the last shred of freedom out of existence from these United States. REGINALD J. VICKERS.

Boom Town

I am not one who is prone to burst forth into print. In fact, heretofore, I have always thought one who did was more or less whacky. However, local conditions demand some outcry lest an epidemic of uncontrollable proportions engulf us all. I don't claim to be a public health expert, but even to the lay mind it is apparent that two phases of local boom conditions demand immediate consideration. These are: (1) Unhealthy number of people using the same bathroom. (2) Unsanitary conditions under which food is sold.

As to the first point, I, myself live in a higher priced rooming house. Even here eight people use the same bathroom. I am informed and can readily believe that in cheaper places these conditions are even worse.

As to the second point, I have lived in many cities in my time. Never have I seen food dispensed in dirtier, greasier, filthier places than here in Washington. Restaurants and drug stores seem to operate free from all regulation or supervision. REALLY WORRIED.

Washington, Aug. 28.

Strike Privilege

During the Boston police strike Calvin Coolidge, then Governor of Massachusetts, sent the following telegram to Gompers, head of the American Federation of Labor: "There is no right to strike against the public safety of anybody, anywhere, any time." The strike collapsed. That message made Coolidge President.

Now in the midst of a grave national peril, we see that almost at once on the awarding of important defense contracts there follow ugly strikes, usually attended with violence. No one can doubt that many, perhaps most, of these strikes are instigated by Fifth Columnists, who in this matter seem to be unusually resourceful and successful. The Administration seems to regard itself as helpless except to appease the strikers. One wonders if Coolidge's telegram, slightly revised, may not come soon. Perhaps as follows: "There is every right to strike by anybody, anywhere at any time, provided the strike is against the public safety." FRANK N. NOY.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 26.

Dental Caries

In your editorial of August 18, entitled "Unfit for Service," you say: "For the most common physical causes for which draft registrants are rejected—excessive dental caries, orthopedic weakness, pulmonary and heart disorders—are traceable for the most part to such factors as early malnutrition or infections from controllable diseases."

A medical man of very large experience says that highly milled, "refined," cereal foods have a tendency to destroy the teeth, and during my 27 years next door to the laboratories of the Department of Agriculture, where they raise insects for experimental purposes, they told me that they could not raise insects in white flour. How can man expect to live upon what no insect can?

If you will consult Osler or Flint's medical works you will see how vaccinating a child during teething destroys the teeth.

As Ben Franklin well remarked: "Experience keeps a dear school, but fools will learn in no other, and scarce in that."

Daylight Saving

I should like to give the following reasons for the adoption of daylight saving time:

1. The change in time would have an important psychological effect.

2. Necessary electric power would be diverted from lighting purposes to industrial power purposes.

3. Workers of all kinds and men in armed services would have additional daylight. This would provide more time for enjoyment with family and friends, care of homes and gardens, recreation and other activities.

4. Any necessary overtime work would be done more efficiently during the extra period of daylight.

5. Elimination of the confusion which exists between sections of the country which have daylight saving time and sections which have standard time.

Building Site

Every time anyone speaks of the Soldiers' Home, the land devoted to their herd of cows crops up.

It seems to me that the logical thing to do would be to put the old soldiers out in Arlington, where they would have plenty of room for their cows. No traffic problem would arise. This would release the present site of the Soldiers' Home for the erection of a new Government building and the traffic problem would be solved for the workers. LAURA K. POLLOCK.

The Post Impressionist

Notes Found On the Grass

My wife went to the door.

"Why, Henry!" gasped my wife.

"Great guns!" I exclaimed.

"Goodby," said the man. He drove off, snickering.

I took a taxi next Monday in order to be on time. I didn't want to keep the judge waiting. The time was marked on carefully—"10 a. m." printed out, and "9:30" printed over it in red.

When I entered the court it was full. I had been working since 6 to be there on time. Everyone looked at me. I went in and sat down. The judge wasn't there. The court was empty—that is, except for us jurors.

At 9:39 a deputy marshal in silver shirt came in, yawned.

At the end of the room was the tall judge's bench, surrounded by lesser benches, all inside a circular paling. Nobody there.

"Shall I ask to be excused? Can I be excused if I asked?" That was what everybody was thinking.

I should certainly be excused. What would Clement and Sam and Neil and Goodwin do without me?

And yet why should I ask to be excused from jury duty when boys were being drafted for the Army for two years . . . God knows how long!

10 a. m.—Nothing has happened yet. We are just sitting here. There is a low buzz. One man has a newspaper, the others fidget. One woman has a small son with her, maybe 4 years old. There is a man with waxed white moustache and goatee across the aisle. A policeman goes up the aisle. He tells me court usually lasts a month. We are lucky. The big court over yonder lasts three months. He chuckles.

10:08—Both men have disappeared from judge's bench.

10:15—An elderly policeman with moustache and conductor's coat appears. "All persons not called for jury duty please retire from the room!" he bawls. It scares everybody. The small boy does not leave the woman. The gum-chewing younger woman gasps. Old Moustache passes by the small boy, says nothing.

10:17—Another policeman has entered. Two of them at once! Things are looking up.

10:18—We have lost one policeman.

10:21—We have lost both policemen.

10:28—I can see Moustache through the passageway into the judge's room, seated, and looking at us. He is smoking a long cigar. We have been here just under one hour. We have committed no crime.

10:30—One man goes to padded door and peeks through the glass. Horrid discovery. We are locked in. No. He has unlatched it and gone out.

10:31—Five or six of the men are getting up and going out, to smoke, maybe. Moustache is laughing with the other one in the room ahead. His cigar smokes like a car with a bad carburetor.

10:34—I have a strong desire to make a speech. We have been here 65 minutes! Wonder what my office is doing about that Stevens letter?

10:37—Two girls with blonde hair, 7 and 14, maybe, have come in and seated themselves beside woman in pink, three rows ahead; tired of waiting in the corridor, I suppose.

"Everyone rise! The court is now in session!"

That's 73 minutes late. Sixty-two citizens kept here 73 minutes. If I ran my business that way it would fold in a month. Nobody but a court could run its business that way, I guess. Shall I try to get exemption? Oh dear, wonder what?

The judge is a young man in gray suit. There are two policemen, including Moustache, and two clerks.

"All jurors will please rise and answer to your names!"

We all rise.

"In turn please, in turn please!" says Moustache.

We all sit.

"Here!" . . . "Here!" . . . "Here!" voices are saying. Some are not present. Clerk reads names, Moustache counts aloud.

Funny how your own name always sounds like a thunderclap. "Forty-three" . . . "Henry Herkimer" . . . "Here!" "Forty-four" . . .

We all rise, raise right hand and swear to answer all "interrogatory questions" truthfully s' help us God.

We get printed registry cards, like post cards, and are asked to write on the back whether or not we want to serve. Now is the fatal minute . . . Clement and Sam and Neil and Goodwin. Boys serving in the Army two years, God knows how long. I pass the card back. There is nothing on the back.

The judge is talking. These people are automatically excused: All persons not between 21 and 65. Sensation! One Negro is 65. Citizens of the United States and bona-fide residents of the District. Read, write and understand the English language. "The last is the hardest," says the judge. Faint laughter. Convicted of offense—moral turpitude. Must not have served on jury for one year before. All executive and administrative officers of the U. S. Government. Soldiers. Firemen. Lawyers. Ministers. Physicians. Captains and masters of vessels "navigating the waters of the District of Columbia." (Does that mean Rock Creek?) Any physical deformity incapacitating . . .

11:05—All cards but one are collected by Silver Shirt, who is a deputy marshal. They go up to diminutive clerk in black who evens them by cracking them on desk. One of our number—a little gray man—is still painfully filling out his card. By 11:10 he gets it up.

Clerk has sorted them out, presumably separating the Wills from the Won't's.

The women are excused without comment. A man whose vacation begins the 15th is not excused. What does that mean? Maybe that the court will not sit after the 15th.

11:23—One man has been excused nine times straight. Not this time.

11:25—It would be a good show if you weren't a participant. The judge shuffles the cards; the diminished group nervously watching. Many have been excused.

The judge has two sentences: "Step back," or, "Excused."

The children with the woman, who have been here all along, are finally told to leave the room. They will wait in the hall. They have all been here since 9:30.

12—Waiting.

"The following jurors have been selected. Report here tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. John . . ."

I am a juror. D. S.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Shots at Versailles

M. LAVAL and M. Marcel Deat were shot while they were reviewing a French legion recently recruited under Nazi auspices.

LIPPMANN

The publicly-advertised explanation for the formation of this legion is that there are Frenchmen burning with the desire to cross Europe and fight side by side with their Nazi comrades in the holy war—holy since June 21st, 1941—against Bolshevism. The explanation is almost certainly a fraud.

For M. Laval is not, and never has been, a crusader of any kind. As for his desire to fight Bolshevism in Russia, the best measure of his sincerity is the fact that it was M. Laval himself who, some years ago, made the journey to Moscow, and, in the Kremlin, negotiated a pact with Stalin which was to have become the basis for restoring the military alliance between France and Russia. As for M. Deat, his line has been the isolationist-pacifist line, to ask Frenchmen whether they were going to be such fools as to go and die for Danzig. Thus there is something which smells queerly when M. Deat now gives his blessing to French troops about to go and die for Dnepropetrovsk.

IN FACT, there must be some reason other than the advertised reason why Laval and Deat were reviewing French troops at Versailles in Nazi-occupied France. What can be the purpose of this legion? Certainly not to help Hitler fight the Russians. On the Far Eastern battlefields a handful of hastily recruited French troops could have no military value whatsoever. No professional soldier would want the trouble of equipping and commanding alien and heterogeneous troops as long as he had plenty of men of his own.

As a means of impressing the German people with the idea that Hitler has many allies, this French legion has no doubt a certain propaganda value. But since that effect can be achieved merely by parading some of these troops in Germany, one is bound to ask whether these troops have in reality been recruited for the war in Russia.

THE INTEREST shown in them by Laval and Deat suggests that what is being formed is a corps of storm troopers to subjugate France. No other theory, it would seem, accounts for all the facts. On the Russian front these troops would be negligible. But in disarmed France these troops, armed and equipped by the Germans and backed by the German army, might become a very formidable force to be used for the seizure of all power in France.

From the point of view of men like Laval, Deat and De Brinon, the behavior of Marshal Petain and Gen. Weygand is very unsatisfactory, and it is a question whether Admiral Darlan is strong enough to compel the French police and the French local authorities to crush French resistance and force France into the war on Hitler's side. A corps of storm troopers, trained in Germany and perhaps even blooded on the Russian front, might decide the issue inside France by sweeping aside the hesitations and evasions of Vichy and raising Laval, Deat and De Brinon to supreme power.

The shots fired at Versailles prove what Laval, Deat and their followers have known for a long time: that they will surely lose their lives if Hitler loses the war, and that for them it is therefore a matter of life and death to destroy the French national spirit and make France permanently a subject province of the Hitler empire. Everything they are, everything they have, everything they aspire to is staked on a Hitler victory and the complete destruction of all freedom and of all opposition in France. When men betray their country and embrace the conqueror, they have no possible future except by perpetuating the conquest. Even in Nazi-occupied territory, their lives are not safe: what could they expect in a France from which the occupying troops had been withdrawn?

There can be little doubt then that what Laval and Deat have been organizing is not a crusade against Russian communism but a revolutionary conspiracy to enslave France, to save their own lives and to raise themselves to power. Nor will there be many in France or elsewhere who think that Paul Collette sacrificed his life merely in order to protest against sending a handful of French troops to reinforce the Nazis in Russia. They will know that he died that he might strike a blow at the betrayers of his country's honor and independence.

It is a serious blow. For the policy of collaboration, as it is called, depended hitherto upon the notion that certain privileged men and certain special interests in the conquered countries would make profitable terms with the conqueror, and that the rest of the people would be so dejected, so hopeless, so demoralized and defeated that they would drift with the wave of the future. In the presence of the might of the German army it has been safer and more profitable for the smartly self-seeking elements of the nations to accept defeat and collaborate with the victor. But it now appears that collaboration is going to become a hazardous trade, that among these defeated masses there are emerging men who would rather die than be slaves, and that terrorism may not continue always to be a one-way affair.

THE EFFECTS will be far reaching. For this shooting at Versailles is the climax of the first chapter in the popular uprising which was inaugurated by the British resistance last summer, then carried forward by the heroic stand of the Greeks and then confirmed by the suicidal rebellion of the Yugoslavs. There is little doubt that the resolve has been taken, deep down among the masses of the people, that they will not accept Hitler's new order, and this resolve is a mightier force in human affairs than the parlor game of some of our own innocents who are fascinated by what they think are the blueprints of a unified Europe. When men, simple men who arise here and there and everywhere, have come to the point where they are resolved to die rather than to submit, there is loose in this world a force which will make history.

Nineteen forty-one, we suddenly begin to realize is not 1939 or even 1940. In 1939 the peoples were asleep. In 1940 they were stunned. In 1941 they know, and their tempers, tried in the fires, have begun to harden. Until they did know and had become hard, it was easy to defeat them. For all the risks were one-sided: those who resisted the new tyranny had to risk everything in battle, whereas those who did not resist thought that they were safe and that they might profit.

In 1939 and 1940 a people which challenged Hitler faced hideous punishment; a people which served Hitler risked nothing at all at the hands of Hitler's enemies. Thus frightfulness paid handsome dividends. It would have continued to pay them but for the fact that in 1941 there are signs from all over Europe, and in the outer world as well, that it is ceasing to be safe to surrender, and that the peoples who have now suffered and have learned are resolved to make collaboration a very dangerous game to play with.

OPM Hails Unification

Knudsen Is Pleased

President Roosevelt's newly created Supply Priorities and Allocations Board, implemented yesterday by extensive reorganization within the OPM, was hailed within the defense agencies as a major advance in revitalizing the Nation's armament efforts.

OPM opinion was almost unanimous in concurring with a declaration made by OPM Director William S. Knudsen. At a hastily called press conference, the production chief declared:

"The total effect of Mr. Roosevelt's action will be good. Now we'll be able to sit down, all of the defense agencies in one place. Hitherto one agency talked and moved one way and another way. Now we'll be able to arrive at decisions that won't be upset."

Knudsen revealed that the new board, created Thursday by executive order, will hold its first meeting at 4 p.m. Tuesday.

He also disclosed that the OPM Production Division, headed by John D. Biggers until his appointment Thursday as Minister to Great Britain, has been split, with one part, a new Materials Division, under the directorship of William L. Batt, and the Production Division with William H. Harrison as chief.

Batt, formerly deputy director of the Production Division, belongs to the so-called "expansionist" wing of the defense administration, being the first major OPM official to call for enlarging the production of raw materials. He is the president of the Philadelphia ball-bearing concern, SKF Industries.

Harrison, whose job will be the supervision of the actual production of finished armament items, is the former vice president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Knudsen also announced that Douglas L. MacKeachie, formerly deputy director of the Purchasing Division, has been made director, succeeding Donald L. Nelson, executive director of the SPAB and director of the OPM Priorities Division.

The Gallup Poll . . .

By Dr. George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 29.—If the historian of the future wants to explain the reason for the British people's stubborn resistance to months of hammering by Nazi Germany, he might do worse than examine what the average Briton—in the summer of 1941—thought he was fighting for.

An answer to that question is provided in a Nation-wide study of rank-and-file views recently completed by the British Institute of Public Opinion, in which Britishers in hundreds of different occupations were asked:

"What do you think we are fighting for?"

Probably never before—during the course of a major war—has it been possible to gain so much insight into the actual "fighting symbols" in the minds of ordinary citizens going about their jobs.

Fight for Freedom

Here is what the survey found:

First, by far the largest number of Britons, faced with the open question, said they thought they were fighting for something conveyed by the words "freedom," "liberty" or "democracy." Forty-six per cent of all replies to the question fell into this category.

While a student of social psychology might be quick to point out that such symbols may be actually only a reflection of what the average Briton hears from his government and his newspapers, nevertheless these symbols (a psychologist would call them "positive" symbols) are apparently uppermost in British minds today.

"To Stop Fascism"

The second largest group of answers were expressed in such phrases as "to stop Fascism," "to end Hitlerism"—or "to stop aggression." Replies of this type were commonest among members of the trade unions, and also, interestingly enough, among well-to-do voters. They accounted for 14 per cent of the opinions given.

Other frequent answers grouped themselves as follows:

"It is Britain versus Germany;" "it's them or us;" "we're fighting to keep what we've got."—8 per cent

"We're fighting for a better world after the war"; "for lasting peace."—7 per cent.

"We're simply fighting to exist"; "we're fighting for our lives, mister."—5 per cent.

The remaining percentages were made up by 7 per cent who would indicate no opinion, and by 13 per cent miscellaneous replies including approximately 6 per cent who expressed dissatisfaction with Britain's war aims as these voters conceived them.

August Defense Spending Hits Billion Dollars

Treasury defense expenditures passed a billion dollars in August, the first such month since the last World War.

With three business days of the month yet to mark up, the Treasury said yesterday that expenditures from August 1 through August 27 for defense totaled $1,001,446,512.

This was about 72 million more than was spent in the whole month of July, and about five times as much as was spent in August last year, when the defense program had barely begun.

The Treasury figure did not include, however, defense disbursements of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and its subsidiaries, which have been running over 60 million a month.

How It Was Spent

Spending in the first 27 days of August through the Treasury included $309,972,859 for the Army, $351,113,194 for the Navy, $57,981,182 for lend-lease, $24,962,550 for defense activities of the Federal Security Agency, $21,570,260 for defense jobs of the Federal Works Agency, $13,529,938 for special projects financed out of the President's defense fund, $8,416,495 for emergency ship construction of the Maritime Commission, $2,222,367 for administrative expense of selective service, and $11,777,805 for other defense activities.

The August figures fulfilled a prediction of Budget Director Harold D. Smith that defense costs would reach the billion-dollar-a month mark by September.

Inventors And War

By Frank Short

Need For A Mental Blitzkrieg

OUR "SYSTEM" of starving the defense establishments between wars is the primary cause of a great misfortune: the inventive mind cannot be turned toward war in great volume prior to the imminence or outbreak of hostilities. There results a lag between the start of the war and the output of military inventions—and a much greater lag between the latter and the completed development of the useful ideas. An invention "on order" is of no more use than arms "on order."

Somehow, the startling new inventions generally come from outside the orthodox or authorized developmental system. Perhaps this is because the authorized military system personnel is too close to the orthodox line of development to generate "wild ideas." Assigned problems are too pressing. Personnel is limited—funds are extremely limited. And there is a strong tendency for the executive mind in charge to frown on mental excursions outside the field of the assigned task.

A case is called to mind of a development laboratory of a large manufacturer. It was first located in the dark and rather insanitary basement of a building, quite a distance from the plant; it was awkward in shape, facilities were few and of the homemade character. It was crowded to the ceiling and always in extreme disorder. Yet one invention of note after another came out of that laboratory. So much so that the manufacturer built a four-story building for the group. He installed all the latest equipment—everyone had a space of his own with all conceivable facilities right at hand, with assistance for routine work. Adequate regulations were formulated to keep everything clean and in order—ample room for everything.

Thereafter, practically nothing of note issued from the four stories plus tenfold personnel. Perfection of what had already been started—yes. Creation—practically nil. Too much order and regulation for the inventive mind!

ANY MIND, working along a line of thought over a period of years tends to become "polarized" or grooved into channels running toward the goal in parallel lines. The objective assumes a fixity, an immutability—in fact, it becomes mental heresy to question whether the goal itself might not be the right one. Any other path toward this goal or any other goal tends to become axiomatic fallacies. But nevertheless it happens time and again that the "green" individual — generally brand new in the field—brings forth the solution to a problem that has been a puzzler for years. For instance——

For years, efforts had been made to adapt a machine gun to fire .22-caliber ammunition for practice purposes. Too small—not enough kick to the barrel—just one of those things that couldn't be done. But a novice—by no stretch of the imagination an expert on arms—didn't know it couldn't be done so he told them how to do it; simple, too—just split off the rear end of the barrel and let it act alone, helping the recoil a bit with some powder gas pressure—and there you are!

WAR is not won this time the same way the last one was fought. It is always something new that turns the tide toward victory, and the ability of the nation to adapt itself to the new way of fighting or of production is that which gives the conqueror the margin of advantage necessary to win—assuming in all cases that it is a war between equals and not just the overrunning of a small nation by a large one.

Yet nations prepare the same types of offensive weapons and similar methods of defense against attacks. France went even so far in its static mentality that it used the same officers in high places that were there 20 years ago. France should be a most potent example of what not to do—for France had the largest trained army on the continent and was equipped with all the best in tested types of equipment—tested and obsolete, it seems.

In tanks and in war vessels, for a decade and more, increased speed was considered the equivalent of increased armor; yet when a heavy ship got in range of the lightly armored Hood, the Hood was sunk. Tanks, too, must slow down and stop at times, "protective speed" then equals zero!

Fifteen years ago, airplane armor was rejected for increased pay load. Today it is discovered that it is better to get four bombs to the target than to have five bombs plus the airplane in a heap on the ground—brought down by antiaircraft fire.

Parachute troops were derided by all the Allies when the Russian army tried them out—yet Crete was captured by them and by them alone.

LET'S turn the picture around, and look at an instance or two where the "wild idea" has been used. Winning the War of 1812 is often credited, with ample justification, to Eli Whitney—a civilian, an inventor who is best known as the father of the cotton gin. He first successfully undertook the interchangeable manufacture of rifles—which made available to the American army, it is estimated, 50,000 more of these vital weapons than could otherwise have been produced.

Success of the North in the War Between the States may justly be credited to that prolific civilian inventor, Ericcson. For his Monitor defeated the Merrimac and stopped the transfer of the North's wooden fleet to Davy Jones' locker—with the imminent lifting of the blockade of the South.

The airplane, the machine gun, the auto, the caterpillar tread—the stuff of which today's devastating "blitzkrieg" is made—were all civilian inventions. Laughed at, each one in its turn, these "crackpot ideas" have revolutionized war.

Assume that the Government were to spend a similar 2 per cent of the present emergency expenditures (reputedly 20 billions of dollars to date), a fund of 400 million dollars for new developments in the art of war would be available—equal to the annual fund now devoted to developments in the commercial field. This would be making a "mental mass attack" on the enemy that could not fail to produce results—the losses would be in dollars, not in men.

A small fraction of this sum would suffice to undertake what is here proposed: to establish in addition to but not under the control of the orthodox military and naval establishments or of existing research and development committees, an inventive and developmental unit directed by men of the inventor type, unfettered by "military requirements" or the knowledge that things can't be done. These men should be of sound judgment and broad experience, but they must still be dominated by that irresistible taste for things that have never been done before! Such a unit would be commissioned to work out practically anything workable that offers a new means of destroying the enemy or for protecting our Nation from destruction.

ALL these inventions should be tested out and be ready for the sudden changes of war. No one can foresee to what uses an idea can be put until it is made, is seen to work and is tried at various tasks. Almost no inventor can make even a technically trained listener visualize the ramifications he himself can see in his invention—even he generally falls far short of the possibilities on the really good ideas. To take a sketch and description, or to listen to a talk and then make a decision either for or against an invention is a hazardous undertaking, even granting a free mind and ample time to study the matter over. To be called upon to do this under the pressure of a thousand other things in preparation for mass warfare constitutes a grave injustice to the expert, to the inventor and to the Nation.

To develop, test and thoroughly try out a huge mass of inventions is a staggering undertaking. Quickly the mind hardens and tends to reject rather than to accept the good that may lie in the basic ideas. In self-defense, the responsible personnel unconsciously must become rejection-minded or be swamped. And to saddle the existing hard-pressed orthodox defense establishments with such a task can only result in the rejection of many inventions that should be used.

Where he has a suitable background of training and experience, no one can be so well fitted to push through to a quick conclusion the development of an invention as the inventor himself, plus able technical guidance and assistance. In such cases, arrangements might profitably be made to employ temporarily the originator of the idea, compensating him for such sacrifice as he may be called upon to make in so doing and seeking to have his job held open for him on his return. With sympathetic, inventor-minded supervision, developments would be rapid and relatively less costly. That the quality of the supervision required is of very unusual type must be admitted—and it is probably hard to find. But the effort is vastly worth the making.

THE QUESTION pops up: What about the defense invention-handling establishments already set up outside of the Army and Navy? Fair enough—they are excellent, but do not cover the field here-in proposed. Their functions do not allow them to go far enough to catch those elusive "wild ideas" that sometimes turn the scales in war.

The National Inventors Council is composed of outstanding men in supervisory capacity and of 12 specialized committees of trained men who, since August, 1940, have sifted "wheat" to the extent of some eight or nine hundred inventions from the "chaff" of around 24,000 ideas submitted. But of the "wheat," substantially 99% are rejected by the "military requirements" of the orthodox defense staffs. About 8% of the 150 per day regularly being submitted to the council warrant serious consideration in their eyes, but theirs is solely a sifting function—it is not possible for them to develop or further pursue any of these inventions once they are submitted to those staffs. It is the expert in past warfare that finally decides that these ninety and nine shall not even be tried out.

The orthodox defense establishments and the National Inventors Council may be likened to two legs of a "defense tower"—which must be taller, figuratively, and must withstand vastly greater storm and stress than the steel giant of 1889. As a third leg, we find the National Defense Research Committee. This is a development organization. Again headed by men of national repute and of eminent scientific standing. The orthodox defense establishments say to them: "Here is a military requirement—what can you do about it for us?" And the N. D. R. C. assigns the broad objective to a group such as an engineering college or a commercial laboratory and gives them free rein to produce the desired result in any way they can. This method is obviously a valuable asset to the orthodox establishments—but, still, it conforms to and is limited by these same "military requirements," which in turn are set up by the experts in past warfare. It does not touch the "ninety and nine"—those wilder of the selected group of inventions submitted to the N. I. C., considered at present too radical even to be tried out.

At this point, it is important to distinguish sharply between the research type of mind and the mental outlook of the inventor. Alas, they are often considered identical! The research expert approaches a problem logically. He studies what has been done before—he reasons out his direction of approach to the problem—he analyzes the factors involved. Methodically, he tries this or that.

THE INVENTOR, however, throws logic to the wind. He has a "hunch" here—a flash comes to him from there (no one knows where they come from). He doesn't know the thing can't be done—or if he does know it, he won't believe it! And so, illogically, "crackpottedly" perhaps, he gets the answer before he can be convinced of its impossibility.

The existing system is set up around research, logic, known laws and tested methods. We have gone far—perhaps far enough along orthodox lines. But certainly there is no body extant sufficiently crackpot in mental outlook to get enthusiastic about the extraordinary devices that the discard certainly is harboring. We are set up to separate the wheat from the chaff—the occasional pearl or diamond or ruby that shouldn't be in the chaff anyway gets by. Wheat is what we are after, and the machine is just too darned good at separating wheat!

With only three legs to stand on, our defense tower verges on instability. How can a fourth be built?

In times of extreme national emergency, money is no object. On the one hand, the existing orthodox defense establishments must not be hindered in the perfection and huge-scale production or procurement of standardized armament (and inventors are a hindrance to this objective)—on the other hand, this country cannot afford to overlook any possible means of offense or defense that inventors can devise. It should not be caught again with all these inventions still unready for use.

WHY NOT establish a group to rework the rejected "ninety and nine"—not from the orthodox points of view, but from the inventors'? Why not a group headed by inventor-minded men who are experienced and well-grounded and yet incorrigibly prone to seeing visions and possibilities in things yet untried? Why could they not be free from yesterday's "military requirements"—free to work out things that may become the military necessities of tomorrow?

Cannot this Nation, spending already 20 billions of dollars on orthodox munitions and perhaps twice that amount more to come in a mighty war effort, set aside 1 per cent of its expenditures to greatly enlarge invention consideration, invention development and invention testing? Cannot independent thought be mustered freely for such a program? Cannot we undertake a mental blitzkrieg?

Is it not true that one revolutionary war invention might make unnecessary a substantial fraction of these vast outlays? Cannot means be afforded to give the using services practical demonstration of what these "wild" ideas can do before they are called upon to make decisions of such very great importance?

Cannot this Nation waste some dollars now to save the waste of men in the event of war?

Haiti Spurns Nazi Protest

U. S. Blacklist Upheld

THE HAITIAN Legation announced last night that its government has "forcefully rejected" a German protest against Haiti's acceptance of the United States blacklist of Axis firms in Latin America and has "in effect rebuked" the German Charge d'Affaires for lodging the objection.

The legation said the protest was transmitted on July 30, and that it threatened postwar reprisals if Haiti accepted the United States "infringement"—the blacklist.

The protest, the legation added, declared that the blacklist already had "terribly handicapped the commercial activities of German firms in Haiti."

It quoted the actual words of the protest as being that "an acceptance of this American infringement without opposition from the Haitian government . . . would not, after the war, remain without bearing on the German decisions at the time when German-Haitian commercial activities are renewed."

Bizarre Louisiana Politics

As these dispatches intimated last week, something certainly is doing in New Orleans involving the Federal Department of Justice and the political interests of the two United States Senators from Louisiana, both of whom were members of the old Huey Long mob. The Senators are Allen Ellender, who was Huey's obedient and shameless dummy in the speaker's chair of the lower house of the Legislature in the sessions which ratified the dictatorship, and John Overton.

PEGLER

James A. Noe, who was a powerful member of the mob in Huey's day, was to have gone on trial in the Federal Court in New Orleans on August 11 on a charge of defrauding the Government of $28,058.69 in income taxes and $4358 in excess profits taxes on the earnings for 1935 of the Win or Lose Corporation, a minor-league Teapot Dome which Huey organized as a means of stealing oil from the State reserve. Before that date, however, Noe, who appears to retain some political strength or nuisance value in the role of an unreconstructed Longster, intimated that he intended to run for Ellender's seat in the Senate in 1942. On May 11 the term of Rene Viosca, the incumbent Federal district attorney in New Orleans, expired and he has not yet been reappointed or succeeded and is not serving, although he has not formally resigned. Ordinarily, the retiring prosecutor serves until his successor is selected, but Viosca has not done so. As to whether Noe could lick Ellender, even though convicted of tax fraud, one man's guess is as good as another's, but he might do it or he might help someone else lick Ellender. The politics of Louisiana are always a muddy mystery.

ELLENDER, under the ancient customs of the Senate, has the right to select the next district attorney, who would be the man to prosecute Noe in the ordinary course of events, and there arises from that fact the interesting possiblity that he could make a deal with Noe to stand aside from the Senatorial contest in return for politically enlightened treatment from the new prosecutor, whoever that might be. Of course, the Department of Justice could take cognizance of the rivalry and name a disinterested man as special prosecutor. But, before we believe that the special prosecutor, if any, would be honestly disinterested, we have to know whether the National Administration and the Department of Justice are honestly disinterested. Would the Administration and the department ignore Senator Ellender's interests and how to the line? The memorable dismissal of a large batch of income tax indictments against members of the old Long mob during Homer Cummings' incumbency with the explanation that there had been "a change in atmosphere" raises a suspicion that honest disinterest might yield to political interest.

Mr. Noe, a regular, stand-up, go-through member of the old Long mob, served a short term as Governor from January to May, 1936, and split with the main body of the gang in the fight for office, power and profit thereafter. Dick Leche, who succeeded Noe as Governor, and Seymour Weiss, who had been Huey's political treasurer, took charge, and went in for thieving on a stupendous scale, along with Jim Smith, who was president of Huey's State University. Noe went his own political way muttering that these others were defying Providence, living in gilded mansions in plain view of the ragged scorn eaters who had been Huey's idolaters. He became their enemy.

IN FACT, your correspondent once received a letter from Mr. Noe offering a batch of incriminating affidavits against Leche, Weiss, Smith and others and your correspondent flippantly asked Mr. Noe to tell him first how he was doing in the Win or Lose Corporation. Thereupon, Mr. Noe's feelings got hurt and he turned his material over to Pearson and Allen, of the "Washington Merry-Go-Round" with the eventual result that several of the scoundrels mentioned in his material went to prison.

Noe was president of the Win or Lose Corporation and Seymour Weiss was vice president and these two signed the tax returns on which the present prosecution of Noe is based. It is charged that they kept a fake set of books to conceal the profits which were loot from the State domain and faked payments to themselves of $92,396 each in salaries and commissions in order to run up the business expenses of the corporation and reduce its taxes.

Weiss pleaded guilty and got a sentence which is running concurrently with his other sentence for using the mails to defraud in the sale to the State of property which it had already bought from him and paid for. But Noe got his continuance on his representation that a witness who is currently engaged in having a baby will testify that he didn't even read the tax returns but signed them hurriedly at the close of a busy day as Governor.

I think I will continue this tomorrow. It really is very bizarre.

V. F. W. Rebukes State Chief Active In Peace Group

Philadelphia, Aug. 29 (AP).—The national encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars publicly reprimanded and then reinstated a State leader of the organization today for his activities as secretary of the Keep America Out of War Committee.

National Commander Joseph C. Menendez took the action against Earl Southard, suspended commander of the Department of Illinois, in announcing the findings of a court-martial conducted by ten past State commanders earlier this month. Southard immediately was seated as a delegate.

The veterans concluded their week-long convention by electing Max Singer, of Brighton, Mass., as their new commander. Singer, a Boston detective inspector and fingerprint expert, had been senior vice commander.

Senate to Get Record Tax Bill Wednesday

the committee meets again Tuesday.

Lowering individual exemptions, imposing steep surtaxes on the first taxable dollar of personal income, heightening corporate surtaxes and excess profits rates, widening and steepening excises, the bill revises upward the Federal tax structure from stem to stern.

Highlight provisions:

Drop personal exemptions from $800 to $750 for single persons and from $2000 to $1500 for married couples to corral about seven million more tax returns.

Provide a simplified tax form for persons earning under $3000 who may fill out returns by referring to a table of taxes.

Impose individual surtaxes (in addition to 4 per cent normal tax) beginning at 6 per cent on the first $2000 of taxable income and ranging to 77 per cent on taxable income over five million dollars.

Retain present "optional" method of computing excess profits taxes, but impose higher profits tax rates ranging from 35 per cent on the first $20,000 to 60 per cent on excess profits of over $500,000.

Merge the normal corporate income rate with the special 10 per cent defense tax for fractionally higher normal corporation taxes.

Raise the surtax rate on corporations to 6 per cent on the first $25,000 and 7 per cent on all above.

Retain $40,000 exemption from estate and gift taxes but slightly increase the steep House rate schedule.

Increase capital stock tax from 1.10 to 1.25 per $1000 but corporations given right annually to revalue capital stock, resulting in revenue loss.

Widened range and increase rates on excises on extended list of articles and amusements, with the old "nuisance" levies made permanent. Include 7 per cent tax on automobiles, $4 per gallon tax on liquor, nearly doubled wine rate, increased admission tax from 10 to 15 per cent, 10 per cent tax on monthly telephone bills. Fail to change taxes on tobacco, beer or gasoline.

Table Indicates Income Tax Levies

The following simplified tax table was approved yesterday by the Senate Finance Committee for optional use of persons earning less than $3000 in filing income tax returns. Low-bracket taxpayers, including all persons brought under the tax structure by the Senate's base-broadening provisions, could simply tax their tax from this table instead of computing return.

If the gross income is over—	But not over—	The tax shall be—Single person (not head of a family).	Head of family or married person.

making any important statement on the delicate negotiations with Japan to curb the spread of war in the Pacific.

Further Conferences

He admitted only that there will be further conferences and that the note from the Japanese premier, Prince Fumimaro Konyoe, which initiated Thursday's conference, would be acknowledged.

"Could you say whether you believe that war can be averted in the Pacific?" asked one reporter, going straight to the point.

The question, the President said with a grin, is too long and too broad—and the Pacific is too wide—to deserve an answer.

Secretary Hull followed this extremely cautious attitude toward publicity during the talks with Japan. By mutual consent between Hull and reporters, his daily press conference was canceled when it was made plain that Hull would refuse to discuss the Far Eastern situation.

Though there was much speculation on what would be the outcome of the negotiations with Nomura, the truth of the matter appeared to be that not even the President, Hull or Nomura know at this early stage whether their efforts will succeed or fail.

No date has been set for the next meeting with Nomura, the President said yesterday.

edly would be included in any conversation with the United States.

It was added, however, that disclosure of Japanese representations to Moscow and Washington over the shipments had been premature.

The cabinet emergency session was held shortly after an official announcement told the public that Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, Japanese Ambassador in Washington, had delivered Prince Konoye's message to President Roosevelt on Thursday.

In a nation-wide broadcast Kishi explained to the public that Konoye's message was of major significance because the United States was eager not to break peaceful relations with Japan.

He reviewed moves of the United States and Great Britain, which he said were designed to block Japan's aims in east Asia, and told the nation it should keep its "firm determination to cope with any untoward happening."

He declared:

"Should the United States and Britain really hope for peace in east Asia they should certainly reexamine the politics they have adopted toward Japan in the past, in the light of ideals often mouthed by them. Unless they transport their ideals into action we cannot accept them at face value."

The Japanese, he said, were trying to create peace and security in east Asia through the aid of Wang Ching-Wei (head of the Japanese puppet regime at Nanking, which claims to speak for China) and through economic cooperation with China and Manchukuo.

In spite of this, these powers (Britain and the United States) are aiding Chungking with materials and munitions and thereby unnecessarily prolonging the unfortunate Chinese-Japanese hostilities," he said.

This aid, he said, "certainly does not fall into line with the principle of world peace as stated by Churchill."

Kishi termed preposterous the British prime minister's assertion in a world broadcast Sunday that Japanese occupation of French Indo-China threatened Singapore & the Philippines. He said the speech was "intended to throw obstacles in the way of construction of a new order by the Axis powers by employing beautiful words to estrange neutral countries."

This remark was the first official Japanese echo of a statement by Count Ladislaws von Mirbach-Geldern, press attache of the German Embassy, who said Tuesday that Churchill's references to Japan were part of a British strategy to split the Axis camp.

All Japanese Saturday newspapers displayed the Konoye-Roosevelt message announcement in large type but refrained from any pertinent comment.

Miss Alfaro Becomes Ensign Maddux's Bride

Ceremony Climaxes Romance That Began Three Years Ago on New Year's Eve

Giving the proper fairy-tale climax to a romance that began three New Year's Eves ago at the Chevy Chase Country Club, Miss Yolanda Alfaro became the bride yesterday afternoon of Ensign Henry Cabell Maddux in a 4:30 ceremony at St. Anne's Church.

Miss Alfaro was given in marriage by her father, Dr. Ricardo Alfaro, former resident of Panama and for many years Minister from the Central American nation, with the Rev. Henry D. Collins officiating. The brunette, dark-eyed senorita, who has spent most of her life in Washington, was gowned in misty white tulle, lace-trimmed at the shoulders and in the skirt which fell into a full circular train. The long-torso dress was worn under a full-length tulle veil which fell from a coronet of orange bossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of white orchids and stephanotis.

True to bridal tradition, she "borrowed" a diamond pin from Mrs. Dodd Hamilton, carried a "blue" medal and wore an "old" bracelet, a Maddux family heirloom. A diamond wrist watch, a present from her bridegroom, provided the "new" item of her apparel.

Matron of Honor Wears Charteuse

Mrs. Victor Alfaro, the bride's sister-in-law and her matron of honor, wore a square-necklined dress of chartreuse taffeta, fashioned with bracelet-length sleeves and a full skirt. Her headdress matched the yellow roses of her shower bouquet.

A group of pretty post-debs made up the bridesmaid list. Patricia Prochnik, daughter of the former Minister of Austria and Mme. Edgar Prochnik, Miss Margaret Gordon, Miss Aileen Harris, Miss Billie Byrd West and Miss Nancy Lawrence all wore dresses similar to that of the honor attendant, in lavendar taffeta. Their headdresses and bouquets were also yellow roses.

Dr. James Twyman served as best man and the ushers were Lathrop Luttrell, Andrew B. Duval, William Wallace of Huntington, W. Va.; Charles R. Grant, jr., Rogelio E. Alfaro, a brother of the bride; Alfred Berkeley of Roanoke, Va., and David A. Harrison, 3d, of Hopewell, Va.

Following the candlelight ceremony in the white flower and palm-decorated church, a reception with guests from the ranks of residential, diplomatic and official society was held in the Alfaros. Mrs. Alfaro received her guests in a floor-length frock of powder blue chiffon with which she wore a petite blue-veiled hat of pale pink feathers. The mother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Katharine Olivier Maddux, had chosen a beige crepe dress, a brown picture hat and a corsage of orchids.

The newlyweds left after the reception for a motor trip through the Northern States and expect to return to Washington in about 10 days. They will stay in town several days before going to Norfolk, Va., where Ensign Maddux will receive his future orders.

Many Here From Out of Town

The bride, who made her debut at a large tea two seasons ago, was graduated from Holton Arms School in 1939 and is one of the most popular members of the younger set. Since the announcement of her engagement in March, she has been the inspiration for countless parties and the last few days has seen a swirl of fetes for the young couple. Her husband was graduated two years ago from the University of Virginia, where he was a member of Delta Psi Fraternity, the Skull and Key Club, the German Club, the T. I. L. K. A. Society and the V Club. He was recently graduated from Northwestern University with the rank of ensign.

There can be little doubt that, though of Panamanian origin, the Alfaros have their roots deep in Washington. Dr. Alfaro made this his permanent home after his second term as minister and returned to Panama only when he was drafted to run for President. Before the election, however, he returned to this country, alleging that the political machine there was so corrupt that he would withdraw from the race. Now, with their daughter, the former Amelita Alfaro, making her home in Washington with her husband, Frank Weller, and their two sons, Victor and Rogelio, making their home with their wives in the Capital, Dr. and Mrs. Alfaro think of themselves as close to "native" Washingtonians.

Among the out-of-town guests at yesterday's wedding were Mrs. Roy Hebard, of White Plains, N. Y.; Dr. and Mrs. Jose Gonzales, of San Salvador; Miss Leopoldine de Noronha, of New York; Dr. Pollard Olivier and Miss Elise Olivier, of Philadelphia; Page Marsden, of Norfolk, Va.; Miss Mary G. Peyton and Bradley Peyton, of Charlottesville, Va., and George Ferguson, also of Charlottesville. Other non-Washingtonians were Harry Hart, of Miami, Fla.; Col. Thomas J. Smith, of Cape May, N. J.; Fielding Louis Olivier, Miss Katherine Olivier and Miss Courtnay Olivier, of Staunton, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. William Wallace, of Huntington, W. Va.; Miss Jane Funkhauser, of Roanoke, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Evan Warfield Hook, of Baltimore, and Mrs. F. W. Twyman, of Charlottesville, Va.

Barbara Orvis Plights Troth

Of interest in Washington is the announcement of Mrs. Clay Hardin Orvis, of New York City, and Warner Dayton Orvis, of Katonah, N. Y., of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Barbara Nazre Orvis, to Jose Antonio de Zalduondo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Pio de Zalduondo, of New Orleans.

Miss Orvis attended Miss Hewitt's classes and the Ethel Walker School. She was graduated from Sarah Lawrence College and was introduced to society at a tea dance at the Colony Club in December, 1937. She is a member of the Junior League.

She is descended, on her mother's side, from Martin Hardin, a Huguenot who emigrated from France at the time of the revocation of the edict of Nanjes, settling on Manhattan Island in the original colony of New Amsterdam. She is also descended from the families of Henry Clay and Ben Hardin and the Taliaferro and Barbour families of Virginia.

On the paternal side Miss Orvis is a descendant of George Orvis, who came to this country from England in 1639 and became one of the original settlers of Farmington, Conn. Her grandfather, the late Edwin Waitstill Orvis, founded the Colonial Bank of New York City in 1890 and was senior partner of Orvis Brothers & Co. Miss Orvis' father is now senior partner of the firm and chairman of the board of the Citizens Savings Bank of New York City.

Mr. de Zalduondo is a native of Spain and received his early education in that country and in France. Later, he family settled in New Orleans, where he attended Tulane University. He is with Pan American Airways.

Mrs. Ward Will Return Tuesday

Writing from Newport, R. I., Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward reports that she is planning to return to Washington on Tuesday after spending the summer in the North.

On Thursday Mrs. Ward gave a luncheon at Baileys Beach Club in honor of Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Emery Toole, of Hartford, Conn. They had reached Newport on Wednesday aboard the Guggenheim yacht Firefly.

Col. and Mrs. Guggenheim entertained at a dinner aboard their yacht on Wednesday for Mrs. Ward. Also in the party were her house guests who are stopping with her at the Playhouse on Ocean Drive. They are Mrs. Ainesworth Rane and her daughter, Stepheny, of Boston, Mass.; Anjer Belmonte, of New York, and Nelson Levings, of Levingshire Plantation, Miss. The Guggenheims expect to return to Washington September 15.

Chilean Embassy Scene of Informal Cocktail Party

The Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels gave an informal cocktail party yesterday afternoon at the embassy on Massachusetts Avenue.

Serving as co-hostesses was Senorita Cristina Michels, their daughter. Honor guests were 14 Chilean students who are in the United States on a scholarship. Guests included members of the State Department, Pan American Union and a smattering of the young set.

Smith–Farmer Nuptials Held

Miss Genie Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Amos Smith, of Ashton, Md., became the bride of John B. Farmer, son of Mrs. Mildred Farmer and the late Charles Farmer, of this city, last evening in the rectory of St. Louis Parish, Clarksburg, Md. The Rev. Joseph J. Leary officiated.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss F. Elizabeth Smith. The bride wore a gown of soldier blue velvet with black accessories and her corsage was of gardenias. The maid of honor was attired in Eleanor blue with wine accessories and wore a corsage of gardenias. The best man was Mr. Clifton Martin, of Oakdale, Md.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Upon their return from their wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Farmer will make their home in Washington.

Miss Remington Engaged to Wed Dr. E. W. Smith

Mr. and Mrs. Horace W. Remington, of New York City and Salisbury, Conn., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Charlotte Edith Remington, to Dr. Edward Warren Smith, son of Dr. and Mrs. Morley T. Smith, of New Rochelle, N. Y., and Ashley Falls, Mass.

Miss Remington was graduated from Vassar in 1939. Dr. Smith was graduated from Dartmouth and from Temple University School of Medicine and is an interne at Grasslands Hospital, Valhalla, N. Y.

Miss Clayton Is Betrothed

The engagement of Miss Betty Virginia Clayton, daughter of Mr. Claud Franklin Clayton, Chief of the Division of Economic Surveys, S. C. S., and Mrs. Clayton, to Mr. Wilton Russell Osborn, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Osborn, of Stroudsburg, Pa., has been announced by her parents.

Miss Clayton is a graduate of Western High School of this city and attended George Washington University and the University of New Mexico. She is a member of the Pi Beta Phi sorority.

Mr. Osborn attended Pennsylvania State College and the University of New Mexico and was graduated from the Army school of aeronautical engineering at Purdue University this spring. He will receive his commission in the Army Air Corps in September.

The wedding will be in the early fall.

Miss Clayton will spend the week-end as guest of Mr. Osborn's parents in Stroudsburg and will later go to New York, where her portrait is to be painted by her uncle, George Baker, president of the Artists Guild Bureau of America.

Elizabeth Hinman And S. P. Williams Engaged to Marry

Maj. and Mrs. Edward Hinman, of New York City and Southbury, Conn., have announced the engagement of Major Hinman's daughter, Miss Elizabeth Hinman, to Samuel Parmelee William, 3d, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel P. Williams, jr., of Waterbury, Conn. Miss Hinman was graduated from the Ethel Walker School in 1938, and attended Byrn Mawr College.

She is a member of the Daughters of the Cincinnati and of the Junior League. Her mother was the late Mrs. Elsie Gridley Hinman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Meade Gridley, of New York. Miss Hinman's paternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hinman, of New York.

Mr. Williams was graduated from the Berkshire School and from the Sheffield Scientific School in 1935, where he was a member of St. Anthony Hall. He is a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel P. Williams and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frederic J. Brown, all of Waterbury.

The wedding is planned for October.

Wrights Honor Couple Soon To Be Married

Entertaining in the garden of their Georgetown house, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Bennett Wright were hosts at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon in honor of Miss Edythe Corbin and Capt. Charles Olin Bruce, Medical Corps, U. S. A., who will be married next Tuesday.

The party was informal and guests clustered about the buffet table and impromptu bar that had been set up in the garden of the Wright's attractive home. Among those attending were several from the French Embassy including Baron James Baeyens, First Secretary; the Assistant Naval Attache and Marquese de Levis Mirepoix, the Assistant Air Attache, Lieut. Michel Dorance, and Etienne Burin des Roziers, Attache.

Still others who stopped in to greet the young couple were Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. John Griffin, Lieut. Don Wenger, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Knowlton, Miss Julia Kelly, Miss Don Lowry, Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Buchanan, James Douglas, Mr. and Mrs. James O'Grady, Mr. and Mrs. John Finucane, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Finucane, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Adams, Miss Betty Lloyd Hutchison, Richard Hutchison and dozens of others.

The bride-elect, who is the daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Clifford Corbin, and Capt. Bruce will be feted at a number of other pre-nuptial parties. Today Maj. Don Lowry will be host at cocktails. Mrs. John Finucane, aunt of the bride-elect, will be hostess tomorrow afternoon for the young couple and that evening Gen. and Mrs. Corbin will entertain at dinner for members of the wedding party.

Ruth McCormick Is Married To M. P. Miller, Jr., in Illinois

Rockford, Ill., Aug. 29.—The marriage of Miss Ruth McCormick, daughter of Mrs. Albert Gallatin Simms, of Rockford, Washington and New Mexico, and the late Senator Medill McCormick, to Maxwell Peter Miller, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Peter Miller, of Rockford, took place at 4 o'clock this afternoon in the rustic setting of the Middle Creek Church in suburban Winnebago County. The Rev. Henry Armstrong officiated.

The gowns of the bride and her attendants were designed in keeping with the country setting. The bride was given in marriage by her stepfather, Mr. Simms. She wore a simple-styled gown of white marquisette, designed by Jean Short, of Omaha. It was made with a bertha collar, full skirt almost touching the ground, no train and was fitted at the waist. Her veil of tulle was of fingertip length and she carried a round bouquet of sweet peas.

Her sister, Mrs. Courtlandt Barnes, of 123 Prince Street, Alexandria, was her honor attendant. Mrs. Barnes wore a gown of varicolored muslin, made with a white top but shading into pale green. The gown was made with a low waistline and buttoned down front. She wore a small white flowered hat and carried a sheaf of white gladioli.

The gowns of the two bridesmaids, Miss Ann Simms, of Albuquerque, N. Mex., and Eleanor Metcalf, of Providence, R. I., and Chicago, were made of pale green muslin arranged in tiers. They wore large bows of green velvet in their hair and carried bouquets of field daisies.

Frederick Miller, of Rockford, served his brother as best man. The ushers were Talcott Williams and Kenneth Jensen, both of Rockford; George Barnes, of Albuquerque; James Castles, of Chicago; Donald Shafer, of Chicago, and Courtlandt Barnes, of Alexandria.

A large reception followed in the garden at the home of the bride's parents here. After a wedding trip the couple will live here.

Sleeves Give the Clue To 'Date' of Frock

Dolman sleeves, one of the most comfortable and talked-of sleeve styles for fall is shown above in the novel glove length. They flare out from a wide waistline, accented by sleek narrowness at the hips. The dress, modeled by the new actress, Carol Bruce, is of softly tailored gold wool. Moss-green accessories provide a striking color contrast

Bishop Raglan Kimona Dolman

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

If you want to tell whether a woman is wearing last year's dress, look at her sleeves. As indicated in the sketches above, there are four definite types of sleeves this season — bishop, raglan, kimona and dolman. In most of the new dresses, you will see one of these styles, or its adaption.

So that you may identify the different versions, the sleeves are explained as follows:

THE BISHOP—A feminine looking sleeve falling in gathered fullness from a yoke and caught in by a tight fitting cuff. This style is not only popular in dresses, but also lends itself gracefully to coat sleeve treatment.

THE RAGLAN — A loose sleeve that extends up to the seamline from the underarm to neckline, giving a slanting seam line from the underarm to the neck. Originating from a coat worn by the English Lord Raglan, it has been a favorite coat sleeve for 137 years. Its appearance in dresses is more recent.

THE KIMONA—An unfitted sleeve, either with the top seam running from neck to wrist, or with the dropped seam just below the shoulder. It will be remembered as the sleeve in the Japanese coolie coats, worn as negligees.

THE DOLMAN—A sleeve of Russian influence that is cut in one piece with the dress bodice. It was revived primarily to offset the slenderness of the skirt silhouette.

The first dress you critically examine may exhibit none of these four sleeve styles, but don't jump at conclusions. When our football shoulders were taken away, not four, but many sleeve versions stepped in. While all sleeves are wider and armholes deeper, sleeves lengths have varied too. There are elbow types, bracelet lengths and three-quarters length. Watch for them!

Following Difference of Opinion Concerning Best Method of Effecting Property Transfer, Farmer's Love for Wife Cools; She Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Feeling that you are very sincere in your work, I would like your advice on the following: About 20 years ago, my husband wanted to move from the city to the country. Without question, I went with him. The place into which we moved was for sale. My mother bought the property as an investment; and, also, with the idea of helping us.

She had worked for many years, following my father's death. And when her health failed, we gladly took her into our home. During the 20 years we have lived on her place, both she and my husband have made many needed repairs. We have paid her no rent and she has paid us no board; just a sort of exchange. When the farm was purchased, the deed was made out in my mother's name and mine. Now, my mother wants to give the farm to my husband and me. Recently she had a deed drawn,—made out to Mr. and Mrs.

My husband is in business on the side, and makes a fair living. However, due to poor collections, he has difficulty meeting his bills at times. Therefore, when the matter of changing the deed came up, I asked him if he thought it would be wise to have his name on the deed. I explained that I thought his creditors could (and might) sell the farm in order to collect. Is this true?

After 20 years' happy married life, we are sadly drifting apart. He says I have killed his love for me, because of my lack of confidence in him. He takes the attitude that I insinuated he doesn't pay his bills. He wants the new deed made out to me and our daughter, for he says in case of my mother's death there would be an inheritance tax, as the deed stands. Is this true?

My husband is a good provider and stays at home, but nowadays he will not be congenial. He just sits there with a long face. Formerly, he had a very lively disposition and was good company. Do I have a problem? Or am I just being sorry for myself? Is there anything you can suggest for me to do? WORRIED.

Ask Reputable Lawyer To Adjudicate Dispute

DEAR WORRIED: Supposing your mother were to transfer the farm to your husband and yourself in a deed which invested both with so-called "common" ownership, it is true the property would thereafter be liable to attachment for debts your husband might owe. Yet, another kind of deed, granting both "joint" ownership, would obviate that possibility. This information is furnished by a lawyer with whom I have discussed your dubiety. He goes on to say, however, that the legal handling of real estate is a field so technical and highly specialized that it is unwise (because potentially misleading) for even a lawyer (much less a layman) to proffer broad general opinions.

As to whether payment of inheritance taxes could be legitimately avoided, by transferring the property now from your mother's name (and yours) to your name and your daughter's,—this would hold true in some States, at least providing the transfer were made more than a year prior to the donor's death. But again, here is a question properly requiring careful legal consideration of the special circumstances, if a sound legal analysis and trustworthy recommendation are to be made.

It is unfortunate that your husband reacted so "touchily" to your attempt to discuss the proposed transaction from all angles, so as to be sure of making the most foresighted arrangement. Rather than resent your sensible attitude (as supposed sly disparagement of his integrity or financial acumen), he should have seen that you simply wanted his cooperation in drafting a plan that would afford greatest security for the family. And if he were a man well schooled in able management of finances, he would have weighed your suggestions in an amiably business-like frame of mind.

However, his hypersensitivity is actually directed more at himself than at you,—if only he rightly understood it. Knowing that he lacks the "Midas touch" (a lack which may be actually more to his credit than not; because reflecting a generous, easy going temperament), and probably never very happy at being obliged to live most of his life on his mother-in-law's property, it is likely that in his own heart he compares himself unfavorably with persons who seem to possess a shrewder "money sense" than he; and consequently is somewhat on the lookout for criticism in that quarter from you.

As to what you can do to heal the breach—perhaps the best thing to do would be to sympathetically and affectionately override his gloomy standoffishness, by fervently assuring him you meant no offense; that you are as unhappy as he, if you have unintentionally hurt his feelings; that you always have found him to be the best of all possible husbands; and that you simply cannot be satisfied with any arrangements made, unless he is pleased with them, too.

Undoubtedly you do have a problem to solve—and it does not originate in a feeling of self pity on your part. The problem is how to safeguard the family's basic security, without sacrificing domestic harmony. This can be done by each of you putting aside his personal opinion regarding the (shall we say?) "smart thing" to do, and letting a competent, mutually acceptable lawyer adjudicate the dispute. When a lawyer (of excellent record and reputation) gives you his opinion of the best way to handle the property transfer—both of you may endorse it as a specialist's constructive, disinterested counsel. That way, neither of you will be putting himself in the delicate position of walking roughshod over his life partner's preference.
M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Shorter Haircut Is on Way Back, Says Westmore

Hollywood, Calif.—In Hollywood the talk is more often about "short hair" and its future.

Some say they will, some say they won't—return to locks sheared and shorn. But it's the opinion of Perc Westmore, makeup expert, that, while many will probably never snip off more than an inch or two, the shortened haircut is on its way back. So far, few have actually taken the step. Bette Davis has hers curled short, although it's not actually cut. So does Nancy Coleman. But Greta Garbo and Joan Bennett are the first two to go all the way in the new trend.

"Many women will immediately envision a return to the ugly shingled bob," said Westmore, "But that's not true this season. It's too mannish. The 1941 trend is toward only those coiffures that are feminine and flattering. Girls may wear all the fancy hair-dos they like this year with shorter ends making them simpler to arrange. In the "upped-do" pigmy tendrils easily slide into place to be secured with a minimum of bobbie pins and combs.

"The woman who is maturing with grace and beauty should wear a short, sleek coiffure similar to Mary Astor's, styled for her role in "The Maltese Falcon." Mary's hair is brushing up and back in diagonal swirls, fitting her head like a neat little cap.

"Straight, blunt ends will be among those present but this arrangement will be worn only by the younger girls, those with fresh, youthful faces. We cut an inch off Joan Leslie's long bob yesterday but only an inch. Although Joan is the perfect type for this loose, dutchy cut, she wants to do it gradually.

"Which is a good suggestion. Don't hack the hair off indiscriminately. You may not be the type for very short hair."

Hips Must Be Unpadded To Wear the New Peplums

By Ida Jean Kain

TUNICS and peplums are high in style this season—and very flattering they are to the gals with streamlines. But one brush with this fashion reveals they cover up hips but don't hide them. And to make matters worse, seven of those ten pounds you gained this summer are probably padding the hips.

There is nothing for it but exercise. With the right kind of exercise, two weeks from today you can wear a tune frock with dash. But if you are not in earnest about slimming down the hips, skip it, because these exercises are not easy.

POSITION: Assume "knee chest" position; standing on knees, head resting on folded arms on floor.

MOVEMENT: Raise one leg high up in back, knee straight. Hold, lower. Raise the other leg upward until it is in line with the trunk. Hold, lower. Repeat 12 times, later 25.

Tones Muscles

That exercise tones the muscles on the back of the hip, also strengthens the abdominal muscles.

To smooth down that shelf-like appearance, nothing beats rolling.

POSITION: Sit on the floor, leaning slightly back until the weight is brought to bear on the exact spot that needs slimming. You are now in a semisitting position. Arms out at sides, slightly back, ready to act as a brace.

MOVEMENT: Roll across the hips over to the side thighline, flinging the arm out at the side as a brace. Roll back across the hips to the opposite side, using the other arm as brace. Roll 20 times, later work up to 50, and, finally, if necessary, to 100 counts. That exercise will quickly slim down hips that ride out behind, bustle-fashion.

Bicycle Exercise

For your third exercise you can take your choice between the old bicycle exercise, in which you get up on your shoulders, elbows on floor for support, and peddle for dear life, and the side bicycle, which is a bit easier. It goes like this:

POSITION: Lying on side, legs stretched downward, elbow bent, hand braced in front of chest on floor for support.

MOVEMENT: From this position you work the legs like pistons, bringing one knee toward chest as the other is stretched downward, bring alternate knees up and down in an easy motion. Repeat for 50 counts.

Finish with the reliable leg-swinging exercise:

POSITION: Standing, holding on to chair or table for support.

MOVEMENT: Swing one leg up in front, then away up behind until the leg is raised to a right angle. Swing for 25 counts, rest and change sides and swing the opposite leg. Later work up to 50 counts with each side. Joan Crawford never misses doing that exercise 100 times with each leg every morning, and claims it is the best hip streamlining exercise ever invented. Try it!

She Prevents Bumps by Rolling Exercises

Happy face, comfortable position? But Mildred Coles, movie actress, is about to change both for plenty of grunts and grimaces when she launches into Miss Kain's rolling exercise (described on this page). As a means of chastising the derriere it can't be beat—not even by relying on the tacit cooperation of some friendly horse. It's easier on the purse, not to speak of the derriere of those whose experience would seem to prove that there are no "friendly" horses

Pick Food For Vitamins

HOW SHE stands out from the ordinary run of women—the woman who glows with life and vitality. You see so many tired, nervous faces, but hers is radiant even when she's no longer young.

Her beauty secret? Often just vitamin-high meals. For without vitamins enough we're susceptible to a host of ills that affect both health and looks.

Lack of Vitamin A may cause eye trouble, susceptibility to colds; lack of B, nervousness, a below-par feeling and, without enough C, your teeth suffer. D also is needed for healthy teeth, and bones and tissues. Lack of G may be behind digestive troubles, a poor skin.

But with a vitamin table it's easy to plan healthful menus. In a slice of liver you get large amounts of all the vitamins, especially A and G. Tomatoes are rich in A and C, whole wheat and enriched white bread have B and G. Bananas have fair amounts of all the vitamins except D.

For this vitamin, D, sunshine and fish-liver oil are your best

Hollywood Refutes Notion That Rouge Harms the Skin

Hollywood, Calif.—A great many people believe that rouge is a contributing factor to skin blemishes. Nothing could be further from the truth, although rouge does color the pores, if applied directly to the skin. This is the conclusion of Hollywood make-up experts.

In the same vein is the contention that all cosmetics are eventually harmful to the skin. Pure cosmetics will never harm the skin. But even the best of them must be religiously removed each night before retiring. The woman who really cares about her complexion will spend plenty of time on this nightly ritual.

As for rouge, remember that the cream type should be applied directly over foundation and before putting on powder, while dry rouge goes on over both foundation and powder.

No woman need feel that she must ease off on powder as she goes from her thirties into her forties because its continued use might hasten the wrinkles that must eventually appear. Billie Burke, known for her youthful skin as well as her youthful spirits, finds that powder of a very light consistency fluffed over her powder base is an actual protection against sun and wind.

Mud packs and clay facials are not harmful unless they have an exaggerted drawing power, which may break the delicate blood vessels in the skin. Egg masks work the same wonders and are kinder to the tissues. Another useful typ eis the yeast mask applied by Mary Astor.

Pictures and Background Stories on D. C. Slayings

Biographical Sketch of Jarvis Catoe

JARVIS ROOSEVELT CATOE, who owes his middle name to the fact that he was born in the first President Roosevelt's Administration, hardly conforms to the "killer type," as popularly conceived.

During all stages of questioning yesterday he remained mild mannered, almost benign. Possibly this is a reflection of his brief career as an undertaker's assistant.

The confessed slayer of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, Rose Abramowitz and five other women is rather short and stocky. He is 5 feet 6 inches tall.

HE attended the first seven grades of school in the little town of Kershaw, S. C., where he was born. He is one of seven children.

Women who know Catoe describe him as a "smooth" talker, one who has a neat way of striking up a conversation and keeping it going. It was that way yesterday while he was being grilled by detectives. Except for an occasional stuttered phrase, which betrayed nervousness, he was fluent—almost eager—as he told his stories and answered questions.

According to police, he was born October 6, 1905, in Kershaw. Twenty years later he came to Washington, where he worked at various times as a mechanic and laborer. He also made some extra change as a police informer, opportunities in this field being fairly plentiful during the lush prohibition days.

IN February, 1932, Catoe obtained a permit to drive a taxicab. He listed himself as a former "employe" of the Metropolitan Police Department. Three years later he ran afoul of the law when a judge convicted him on two charges of indecent exposure. He was sentenced to 135 days.

Released from jail in September, 1935, he was in court again less than three months later on two more charges of the same offense. This time he got a 180-day sentence, but with time off for good behavior, he was freed on May 5, 1936.

CATOE weighs about 170 pounds, has powerful biceps and big hands. Capt. Ira Keck, assistant chief of detectives, had him hold the big hands up yesterday as he asked the prisoner:

"Those are the hands you choked those women with?"

"Yes," Catoe replied.

He said he couldn't tell what made him do it, except that he often had "spells," especially after reading crime stories or viewing indecent pictures or "drinking a little wine."

ONE woman told a Post reporter yesterday that Catoe once told her he had a silver plate in his head.

"He said he had been in an accident several years ago and that the doctors had to put a plate in his head," she declared. "Maybe that's the reason he killed so many people."

Post Forecast Capture

AN article in The Washington Post of Sunday, June 22, by Edward T. Folliard, predicted the capture of the fiend who murdered Betty Strieff.

The article said:

"The lust that drove Betty Strieff's assailant to rape and murder will drive him to the same thing again, and keep on driving him until he meets his doom."

AND so it was, according to police reports yesterday. With eight cases of rape behind him, some involving murders, according to his reported confession, Jarvis Roosevelt Catoe went to New York, where he raped and murdered Evelyn D. Andersen, a waitress. He took a wrist watch from Mrs. Andersen and gave it to a woman friend. She pawned it. Through that watch, New York detectives trailed Catoe to Washington.

Catoe Once Called Strieff Murder 'Work of Fiend'

By N. E. F. Meekins

A FEW hours after the confessed slayer and rapist of seven women had choked the life from Miss Jessie Elizabeth Strieff last June, it was revealed yesterday, he discussed the murder with his landlady and described the crime as the work of a fiend.

Jarvis Roosevelt Catoe sat on the front steps of his rooming house, 1730 U Street Northwest, and talked about the case with Mrs. Carrie Jackson. The house is almost within shouting distance of the apartment house where Miss Strieff lived on Nineteenth Street.

"MONDAY — the day after Miss Strieff was killed," said Mrs. Jackson, "Catoe came downstairs and sat on the steps beside me. I was reading about the murder. He asked me, 'What are you reading about in the paper? What's the big story?'

"I told him that a girl had been raped and killed and that she lived just around the corner on Nineteenth Street. He didn't seem nervous or act unusual. I told him that she had been raped and that it was a terrible thing. He then said: 'Yes, it sure is. The man must have been crazy to do a thing like that! Do you think they'll ever catch him?'

"I don't remember what I said then and he left and went down the street."

MRS. JACKSON said Catoe had lived at her house since last February with a woman he said was his wife.

"The woman worked some place, in a boarding house, I believe, on Wisconsin Avenue. He used to take her to work each day and bring her back at night. They were both quiet and minded their own business. I didn't see him very often and seldom went to the room. The woman made up the room and kept it in order. But, whenever I did see Catoe, he would ask me if there were anything new in the murder case. He always said the police wouldn't solve it."

Mrs. Jackson said police came to her house several times about two months ago and inquired about Catoe. She said they were interested in his automobile. "I didn't pay much attention to it, and when I think that he had already killed several people at that time, I begin to shake. My room used to be next to his."

Mrs. Jackson said Catoe and the woman left her house Tuesday afternoon.

THE couple went to 1704 Swann Street Northwest late Tuesday and rented a room.

"Catoe and the woman came to the house and said they wanted a room," said Mildred Jenkins at that address. "I told them I didn't rent the rooms—that I was a roomer. I called the landlord, Durant McDowell, and he talked with Catoe. It seemed that Catoe didn't have any money, and McDowell didn't want him as a roomer. Anyway, after some more talk, the woman took some money from her bag and gave it to McDowell. They moved in and that's all I knew about them until the police came early Thursday and arrested Catoe."

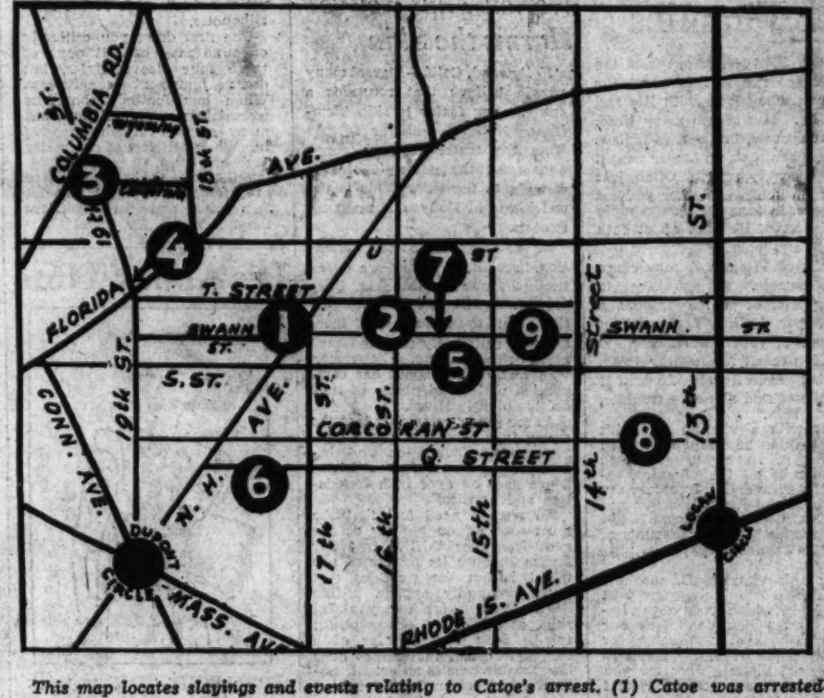
Dr. Laura Killingsworth, 1509 S Street Northwest, in whose garage Catoe said he killed Miss Strieff, said she has known the man for three or four years.

"HE used to come to my place," she said, "to do odd jobs. He cleaned my car and of course knew the garage. I never locked the garage during the day and Catoe knew that, too.

I read about the murder of the Strieff girl, but, of course, never associated it with my garage. If he left any of the girl's clothes in an ashcan, I never saw them."

Police said Catoe had a girl friend living at 1532 Swann Street Northwest, where they found Miss Strieff's umbrella. However, it was said at the house that Catoe had never lived there.

"Catoe used to come to see the girl," said Edna Thurston, "but he never lived here. I didn't know him very well, but I understand he had a silver plate in his head. He said that he had been in an accident several years ago and that the doctors had to put a plate in his head. Maybe that's the reason he killed so many people—that he was off his head sometimes. I don't know."



This map locates slayings and events relating to Catoe's arrest. (1) Catoe was arrested here. (2) Where Mrs. Rose Abramowitz lived and was slain. (3) Where Miss Strieff lived. He Knows His Trees

It may take a poet to write about trees, but Charles Parker, Princeton, N. J., can name them. Competing with other experts attending the National Shade Tree Conference, Parker correctly identified 47 out of 60 varieties of trees and ornamental shrubs in the park. He won.

500 Veterans of the 29th Division Christen 'Cafe Chinstrap' in Memory of Gen. Morton

Party Precedes Annual Reunion Of Doughboys Here

When the soldiers of the Twenty-ninth Division were in training at Anniston, Ala., and on duty overseas in 1918, their commanding officer, the late Maj. Gen. Charles G. Morton, insisted that his men wear the chinstraps of their helmets, and wear them at precisely the correct angle.

In memory of the general's discipline, some 500 veterans of the Twenty-ninth Division Association christened the top floor of the Hotel Willard the Cafe Chinstrap last night for a boisterous preconvention party on the eve of the official opening of the division's annual reunion.

Fifteen hundred veterans are expected to be present at 2 p. m. today for the official opening of the reunion, which will be addressed by District Commissioner Guy Mason and Maj. Gen. P. C. Harris, retired, wartime adjutant general.

Senator Tydings, of Maryland, and former Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey, Twenty-ninth Division veterans, and Senator Robert Reynolds, of North Carolina, will be the speakers at the banquet which will be held in the hotel at 7:30 p. m. today.

Last night at their party, the veterans were looking forward most of all to the parade Monday at which the members of the wartime Twenty-ninth will review a parade of the modern Twenty-ninth, stationed at Fort Meade, in front of the Willard Hotel.

"Us boys who fought through that mud and smoke in 1918 and these kids with all their mechanized equipment," said one veteran. "We'll be looking them over pretty careful."

West Virginia Sends Beauty And Tomatoes

A beautiful 18-year-old West Virginia miss came to Washington yesterday with a basket of "the most beautiful tomatoes in the world"—also from West Virginia, of course.

She is Miss Natalie Bailey, of Beckley, a student at Beckley College and queen of the West Virginia Tomato and Health Festival, which opens today at Berkeley Springs, W. Va., and will continue through Monday.

As the guest of Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, Miss Bailey and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Bailey, and brother Bobby, took a whirl at the Nation's Capital.

Miss Bailey told reporters that "West Virginia tomatoes are a good health product. I think they're delicious personally, but I must say that no kind of tomatoes agree with me very well."

Following lunch in the Senate restaurant, Miss Bailey and her party went to the office of Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, where she presented him with a basket of the famed fruit.

In the afternoon the party attended the Capitol Theater, and Miss Bailey was interviewed by Representative Randolph over Station WINX.

The group entrained last night for Berkeley Springs, where they were to be greeted by a brass band. The three-day festivities at Berkeley Springs will be launched this morning.

1006 Here Face Summons to Army Duty in October

A call of 1006 Washington selectees is expected in October, District selection headquarters reported unofficially yesterday.

The requisition was said to include 886 white men and 120 Negro registrants. The white men will be inducted at Richmond at the rate of approximately 150 a day, September 9, 10, 11, 13 and 14, it was understood. No date has been announced for swearing in the Negroes.

The October requisition, 134 less than this month's call, is smaller than the number expected to be called next month. This is due, to the fact there are comparatively fewer Negro registrants available at present.

In setting the October call, selection officials allowed 110, roughly 9 per cent, against last-minute rejections at Army induction stations.

Hampshire House Will Expand Work

Hampshire House, church-backed neighborhood project at 1105 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, will expand its program and increase its budget this fall to meet growing community needs, it was learned yesterday, as its summer program was climaxed with an outing at Hains Point.

According to Mrs. Warren A. Gardner, board member and chairman of the First Ward Neighborhood Council, the board is hoping to employ a trained social worker who can train volunteer workers from the various churches cooperating in the project.

Interested in the project at present are members of St. John's and St. Thomas' Episcopal Churches; Foundry Methodist, Covenant-First Presbyterian, St. Matthew's Cathedral, Friends' Meeting House and also the WPA and other groups. The House was opened in July, 1940.

The boys at Hampshire House are asking for an airplane modeling class this fall, Mrs. Gardner pointed out. During the summer the lads made window screens and ping-pong tables for the project, using a woodworking shop in the basement.

Mrs. Paul Gross, of the Friends Meeting House on Florida near Connecticut Avenues, supervisor of Hampshire House; Mrs. James Carroll Burns, of St. John's, is board chairman, and Miss Elisabeth Holton, also of St. John's, vice chairman.

A definite fall and winter program will be mapped at the September 16 board meeting.

Convicts Dedicate 'Magellan' Altar, D. C. Woman's Gift

With a "Magellan" altar donated by a local woman as the center of the ceremonies, gray-clad men of Clinton Prison at Dannemora, N. Y., yesterday dedicated their self-built church to one of their own—the "Good Thief" St. Dismas, who was forgiven by Christ while dying with Him on Calvary.

Mrs. Marie Latrobe, 6308 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, wife of Lieut. Comdr. W. C. Latrobe, U. S. A., gave the altar, which has been in her family for generations. It was handed down by her father, a Spanish naval officer. It is said to contain parts of the crude altar which the Portuguese navigator carried to the Philippines in 1521.

The Rev. Ambrose R. Hylands, who came to Clinton Prison as a Catholic chaplain four years ago, said the funds to build the chapel were produced by "bumming and chiseling." Contributions came from men and women of all faiths, from politicians, priests, ministers and philanthropists.

Entertainment Galore Awaits Service Men

There will also be open house at St. John's Parish Hall, Sixteenth and H Streets Northwest, tonight and a dinner and dance in the Fellowship House, 3563 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, tonight. Sunday dinner to all service men attending morning services at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church.

Activities for colored men include: Free swimming, Banneker pool, Georgia Avenue and Howard Place Northwest. A dance will be held at Banneker Fieldhouse tonight. Free movies will be held at the fieldhouse at 8 tonight and city-wide softball finals will be held at the fieldhouse this afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Washington's churches of all denominations welcome men in uniform to weekend services.

Veterans of 43d Meet Here Today

Veterans of the Forty-third Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, who fought in the Philippines on "Bloody Samar" Island during the Spanish War will begin their tenth annual reunion at the Dodge Hotel here today.

The veterans will begin their three-day program with a trip to the Arlington National Cemetery, Lincoln Memorial and Fort Meyer today, and will place wreaths on the graves of Forty-third Regiment officers buried in the cemetery. A business meeting and banquet are scheduled for Saturday, the latter to be addressed by the Hon. William J. Otjen, Oklahoma State Senator and past national commander of the United Spanish War Veterans, while a sightseeing trip to Mount Vernon will conclude the convention on Monday.

D. C. Chiefs Deny Charges On Road Bids

'No Reason for Any Change in Procedure' Found, Says Report Of Commissioners

The District Commissioners yesterday denied charges by the Comptroller General that "inadequate, inaccurate and overstated" methods are used in letting contracts for street and highway construction and repair work in Washington.

In a message to the President of the Senate, signed by Commissioner J. Russell Young, it was stated that an investigation convinced the Commissioners that the Comptroller General's report was "not warranted" and that the board finds "no reason for any change in procedure."

The Commissioners' statement was referred to the Senate District Committee. R. F. Camalier, clerk to the committee, said that he and H. G. Bishop of the Public Roads Administration would examine the files on which the Commissioners' declaration was based and report to the Senate Committee. It will be determined later whether a public hearing is necessary, he said.

The Commissioners' message declared:

"The procedure followed in the District for approximately 20 years is the accepted practice throughout the United States. . . . The practice conforms to all law. The work is properly performed and accounted for and the District and its citizens receive full value for the money invested. A change in method would result in a substantial increase in cost to the District."

The Comptroller General's report, made public last week, alleged various technical irregularities in the Highway Department.

To these charges the Commissioners replied: The report "does not specifically charge that District authosities have violated any law; it does, however, insinuate that the law is not being followed in all cases. Such is not the fact."

Labor Board's Workers Favor Daylight Time

Proponents of daylight saving time yesterday took the lead in the day's ballots, but still lagged behind in The Post poll.

One hundred Washington citizens cast a "yes" ballot and 61 "no." The totals to date are 907 in opposition of the change in time and 613 in favor of it.

Seventy-six of the 100 votes cast in favor of the daylight time came from employes of the National Labor Relations Board, which circulated petitions throughout its departments, and got a unanimously favorable vote.

A reader writes that "we are all creatures of habit and could easily regulate our habits by the clock, even though it were set one hour ahead and we would soon forget that we were doing things one hour earlier than usual."

One die-hard opposing the change in time said he was voting against the proposal because the Washington summers are so overwhelming "that one needs as much sleep and rest as possible." He added that sleep is usually impossible until after midnight.

Two clerks in the Navy Department cast their votes "decidedly against" daylight saving. The early hours in the winter require just as much artificial light as the evening hours, so where, they asked is the saving?

Uncle Sam should devote his time to the defeat of Hitler and let nature take care of itself, said another, opposing the change. Leave well enough alone, wrote Mrs. B. R. S. One mother wrote that her children don't like to go to bed while the sun is shining.

B. M. Benton stated that certain agencies, such as the Weather Bureau, were required by law to keep continuous records on Standard Time; and as long as there are different times in use within a city, there will be confusion, he added.

Burglar Alarm Has Hollow Ring As Bandit Gets $35

Million Needed To Guard D. C. Against Raids

City officials will need one million dollars, rather than $436,000, as previously estimated, with which to give Washington an adequate defense against bombing raids and fires, it was revealed yesterday.

Meeting yesterday with Budget Director Walter L. Fowler, experts in fire department work agreed that 100 additional regular firemen would be needed to assure a full force if the department is to enlist and train 2000 auxiliary firemen for service in case of emergency.

It was pointed out that the auxiliary firemen would be trained by regulars, who would have to be replaced in order to keep the strength of the department up to par. The extra firemen would call for extra equipment, hose, uniforms and other facilities, Fowler said.

Money to finance the program would be obtained from the President's emergency fund, set up to aid municipalities in just such work.

Meeting with Fowler were Chief Engineer Stephen T. Porter, of the Fire Department; Supt. Herbert A. Friede, of the fire alarm system; Capt. C. S. Petersen, administrative officer of the Fire Department, and Assistant Budget Officer William G. Wilding.

The revised requests will be submitted to the Commissioners on Tuesday.

Lieut. Carmichael, Medical Corps, Dies From Gas

The body of Lieut. John Randolph T. Carmichael, 31, Medical Corps officer, who had been stationed at Walter Reed for less than a month, was found in a gas-filled kitchen of an apartment at 2401 Calvert Street Northwest yesterday.

The maid, Mildred Clayton, told the police that she entered the room around 8:30 a. m. and found all the gas jets on the stove wide open. Dr. L. W. Taylor, of Emergency Hospital, pronounced the man dead shortly before 9 a. m. and said that he had been dead for three or four hours. After an investigation of the case Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide. No notes or messages were found.

Dr. Carmichael was a graduate of the University of Virginia and had been a resident physician at the University Hospital in Charlottesville for the last five years. On July 1 he joined the Army Medical Corps and was assigned to Fort Meade. On July 13 he was sent to Walter Reed Hospital to take a month's course in tropic medicine.

Dr. Carmichael will be buried in Lexington, Va.

Harrison Bible Class To Hear Inspector Smith

Inspector Milton B. Smith, of the Metropolitan Police Department, will be guest speaker at the Harrison Bible Class meeting at 9:45 a. m. tomorrow. His talk will be on "The Test of a Christian." Former Inspector William H. Harrison, president emeritus of the class, will preside.

Smith was recently promoted from the rank of captain in the traffic division, and is now in charge of inspecting clothing and equipment for the Police Department.

7,000 Bid Ballet Russe Farewell

The Original Ballet Russe Company packed up its dancing shoes last night after a final Watergate performance of the season before an audience of some 7000 persons.

Its seven-night stand in the picturesque out-door setting, marred only once by the elements, drew a total of some 37,000—equal to the usual number of spectators of baseball at Griffith Stadium over a similar period.

The company wound up its visit with a repeat performance of "Graduation Ball," which gave the spectators the titters, as anticipated, and of "The Swan Lake" and "Aurora's Wedding."

Before packing up to leave for a Canadian tour, a management spokesman revealed the company was on the lookout for young American dancers.

Opportunities, he said, are open to persons who have been ballet dancing since the age of 8, have the talent and ability to perform the company's repertory of 129 ballets and possess the stamina to prepare for an evening's show with four hours' rehearsal and a like period of class drill.

Candidates who make the grade may look forward to a 20-year career, he said.

The company will be back next year, probably with the same cast.

Window Washer Seriously Injured In 40-Foot Fall

James Hicks, 14, Negro, was injured seriously when he lost his balance and plunged 40 feet while cleaning the windows of Nativity Parochial School, 6000 Georgia Avenue Northwest.

He was taken to Emergency Hospital, then transferred to Gallinger Hospital, where an X-ray was to be made to determine his injuries. He may have a fractured hip. Several teeth were knocked out.

James, whose home is in North Carolina, was spending the summer with relatives at 5923 Fourteenth Street Northwest and was earning vacation money by window-washing. The Rev. John F. Fannon, Nativity rector, became one of his "customers" a few weeks ago.

Boy Shooting Victim Reported Improving

Fourteen-year-old Christopher Mertz, jr., 5619 Potomac Avenue Northwest, accidentally shot by a playmate, was reported to be resting comfortably and out of danger in Georgetown Hospital last night.

Mertz was shot by Milton Wickstrand, 13, of 2938 Eskridge Terrace Northwest, while both boys were in the woods on the Virginia side of the river, shooting for target practice, according to the report. Wickstrand aimed at the ground in front of young Mertz, but the bullet glanced up from a rock and struck Metz, passing through his body and lodging in his left hip, witnesses said.

Van Hyning Is Sworn In As Aid Chief

Withdrawal of Candidates Paul Edwards and Ray L. Huff yesterday paved the way for the appointment of Conrad Van Hyning as director of public welfare by the District Commissioners.

Following his appointment yesterday morning, Van Hyning was sworn in before Commissioner Mason and Chairman Reynolds in the Commissioners' office. Geoffrey M. Thornett, secretary of the Board of Commissioners, officiated at the swearing-in ceremonies.

As predicted in The Post Sunday, the Commissioners had decided to break the deadlock over the appointment of a welfare director by naming a third person, in this case Van Hyning, who has been acting welfare director since the resignation June 1 of Robert E. Bondy.

The board of public welfare had nominated as Bondy's successor, Superintendent Huff of the District Penal Institutions. The Commissioners wanted Paul Edwards, administrator of the District WPA. The deadlock continued unbroken for nearly three months. Recently, Commissioner Guy Mason explored the possibility of ending the impasse by the appointment of Van Hyning, who in his three months as acting director has won the admiration of the city heads.

Yesterday the welfare board, through its chairman, Frederick W. McReynolds, informed the Commissioners they had withdrawn the nomination of Huff with his entire approval. At the same time, the Commissioners revealed a letter, dated August 27, from Edwards, in which he, too, withdrew his name from the nominations, stating "I cannot help but feel that my candidacy for the position has been responsible for the delay."

Talk by Jersey Expert Concludes Shade-Tree Parley

A speech by C. C. Hamilton, of the New Jersey State Experimental Station, Brunswick, N. J., advocating the use of autogyro airplanes and high-power sprayers to protect forests and nurseries and watershed plantings yesterday ended the seventeenth National Shade Tree Conference at the Mayflower Hotel.

A. Robert Thompson, National Park Service, summarized a five-year survey of trees struck by lightning. It was found that only trees more than 50 feet high are in danger, and that effective lightning arresters would prevent any damage at all.

The officers for next year are the same as those for this year. E. N. Cory is the president, with D. C. Welsh as vice president. L. C. Chadwick remains the secretary and treasurer.

Army Assigns 'Paradoctors'

Doctors who will jump from the same planes with air-borne infantry have been assigned to the parachute battalions now in training at Fort Benning, Ga.

The War Department announced yesterday that two medical officers and 15 medical enlisted men have been selected from an overflow list of volunteers for service with the three parachute battalions at Benning.

SMA Rejects 5-Cent Milk For WPA

Van Hyning's Loses Move to Extend, Improve System Of Distribution

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Washington's relief milk program, which is struggling along at one-third efficiency, suffered another blow yesterday.

O. M. Reed, dairy chief of the Surplus Marketing Administration, rejected the plea of Welfare Director Conrad Van Hyning to make low-paid WPA workers eligible for the 5-cent quarts. Van Hyning also had asked that steps be taken to make the project more workable by improving the system of distribution.

Countering Reed's unfavorable decision, however, was mounting enthusiasm for establishment of a penny-half-pint milk program not only for underfed children in Washington schools but the indigent boys and girls who attend clubs and settlement houses.

Condition Impossible

An official of the Surplus Marketing Administration told The Post earlier this week that a "penny project" definitely will be approved for Washington if local sponsors can show that it would increase milk consumption among the children involved by 270 per cent.

Taking the public elementary schools by themselves, such a gain is virtually impossible of achievement, since upward of 10,000 pupils already receive free milk and that many or more buy milk at 5 cents a bottle under the P.-T. A. nutrition program.

However, the 270 per cent requirement can be met—with plenty to spare—if a sufficient number of charitable juvenile service centers desire to participate.

Morris Cafritz, president of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club, expressed keen interest yesterday when informed by The Post that the low economic background of the 16,500 makes them eligible to obtain first-grade milk at a penny a bottle.

Idea Gets Backing

"I shall take the matter up with the board," said Cafritz, who voiced the opinion that a steady, sure supply of milk for the youths would do much to build up their health. At present they get none to drink at the clubs. "A grand idea" was the reaction of Gordon Leech, secretary of the organization.

Charles M. Fyfe, managing director of the Boys Club of Washington, a Community Chest affiliate, likewise was impressed by the possibilities and said he will ask the board of directors to consider making an application.

This group has more than 4000 members, of whom approximately 1500 are active; that is, they go daily to the clubs, situated in various parts of the Capital, for recreation and instruction.

Post Will Inform

The Post will continue to inform juvenile centers of the opportunity they have to obtain penny milk, just as New York, Chicago, Boston, Birmingham and a dozen or so other cities are doing. Under the plan, the children themselves or a public or private agency pays the one cent per bottle and the difference in cost is borne by Federal funds administrated by the Surplus Marketing Administration, an Agriculture Department agency.

The decision against expanding the nickel-quart program, launched here last fall for a fractional portion of Washington's needy families, means apparently that it will continue on its present restricted basis.

Families on private charity, on WPA wages and submarginal incomes will continue to be denied eligibility to buy the low-cost quarts. Distribution will continue to be through 11 milk depots. In many instances persons must travel 5 miles or more if they wish to buy the bottles.

Slightly more than 3000 quarts are being sold daily, although the 5500 eligibles could buy a total of more than 10,000, if all participated.

Policeman, Youth Are Injured in Traffic Accidents

A Metropolitan motorcycle policeman and a 17-year-old boy were injured in District traffic accidents yesterday, though neither case was reported as serious.

Motorcycle Patrolman E. B. King, 27, of 1916 Seventeenth Street Southeast, sustained a fractured right leg and abrasions to the left leg and body when his motorcycle was in collision with a car at Eleventh and L Streets Southeast. The car was driven by William Taylor, 21, of 1232 Thirteenth Street Northwest. King was admitted to Casualty Hospital.

George Clay, 17, Negro, of 2103 Fifth Street Northwest, was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for a possible leg fracture and abrasions to the body after he was struck by an automobile in the 1700 block of Seventh Street Northwest.

Dodgers Nose Out Giants, 5-4; Gain Half Game

Whit Wyatt Hangs Up His 18th Victory

Five-Run Outburst In Fifth Inning Defeats New York; Schumacher Loses

By The Associated Press

New York, Aug. 29.—The league leading Brooklyn Dodgers pounded Hal Schumacher from the mound with a five-run outburst in the fifth inning today to defeat the Giants, 5 to 4, and increase their lead over the idle St. Louis Cardinals to a game and a half in the hot National League race.

Whit Wyatt went the route for the Dodgers to record his eighteenth victory of the year against nine losses. The tall right-hander struck out eight, including Pinch-hitter Gabby Hartnett in the eighth with the tying and winning Giant runs on base.

Joe Medwick and Billy Herman each drove across two runs with singles in the Dodgers' big inning, and Medwick further distinguished himself by making a sensational catch of Dick Bartell's long smash in the ninth. Billy Jurges, Giants shortstop, rapped four straight singles off Wyatt.

Schumacher Is Victim

The Flatbushers' success was their seventh in eight games at the Polo Grounds this year, and it was the tenth defeat for the Giants in their last 12 starts.

Brooklyn scored all its runs off Schumacher on six hits with only one out before Johnny Wittig came to his rescue. Mickey Owen opened the slaughter with a single to center, and then in rapid succession Wyatt singled, Dixie Walker doubled, Herman singled, Pete Reiser singled and Joe Medwick slammed one to center to drive over the final two runs.

That was plenty for Schumacher. Wittig stopped the Dodgers cold, and from then on for four frames, Brooklyn was held to a lone hit by him and Ace Adams. But the damage was done, and though Wyatt had his uneasy moments, he was able to pull through.

Alex Antonio Wins Left-Handed Golf Tournament

By the Associated Press

Toledo, Ohio, Aug. 29.—Alex Antonio, 1938 champion from Linden, N. J., won his second national left-handed golfers' title at Sylvania Country Club today, defeating Johnny Mross, Wisconsin State public links champion from Milwaukee, 2 and 1 in the 36-hole final.

Antonio, 27-year-old clerk, won the first two holes of the initial 18 and reached the halfway mark two up although Mross squared the match by getting consecutive birdie twos on the short ninth and tenth holes.

The Milwaukee star again squared the match at the three-quarter mark by winning the twenty-first hole with a par and the long twenty-sixth with a birdie.

Antonio played the final eight holes in one under par.

Giants Get Shortstop

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—The Giants announced tonight that they had purchased John Davis, a shortstop and third baseman, from their Jersey City farm club. Davis has batted .236 in 121 games this season and should add considerable strength to the Giants' attack.

Former Defeated 9 and 8; Latter Loses 1 Down in Semifinal Round

By Bill Boni
Associated Press Sports Writer

Omaha, Aug. 29.—Marvin Harvey Ward of Spokane, Wash., and Buell Patrick Abott, of Los Angeles, a couple of Westerners to whom the experience is no novelty, reached the final round of the forty-fifth National Amateur golf championship today.

They did so with victories utterly typical of the type of competition they had to wade through in preliminary matches.

Ward, who drew a soft spot in the upper half of the draw, had to go only 28 holes for a 9 and 8 triumph over 28-year-old Bobby Riegel of Houston, Tex., whose 12-over-par 84 in the morning 18 holes left him 6 down and practically out of the running right there.

Abbott 1 Up Victor

Abbott, who went to the final in 1938, the year before Ward won the title at North Shore, drew a flock of tough rivals down in the bottom half. After knocking off such sound swingers as Wilford Wehrle, Harry Todd and Ray Billows in 18-hole matches, he came through to a 1-up victory this afternoon over Ted Bishop of Boston, the New England champion, in a match in which only one hole was halved from the seventeenth in the morning to the thirty-third in the afternoon.

Tomorrow they will meet at 36 holes for the crown which a year ago went to Dick Chapman. The morning round will start at 8:30 a.m. (CST) and the afternoon half at 2 p.m.

Since his opening match last Wednesday morning, Ward has never been down at any stage of any encounter, and he was in no danger of breaking the precedent today. Riegel, who got into match play on a playoff and into the semifinals on that much-discussed 1 up decision over Bruce McCormick, was out of his class and appeared to know it.

National Net Championships Start Today

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 29.—Having ended the preliminary bouncing around which takes them from the whistle stops to the swanky clubs and back again every year, the country's tennis stars start real work tomorrow at Forest Hills in the annual national championships.

Sliced by the effect of the draft, the men's entry list includes only 64 players, and is topped off by a seeded list which finds Champion Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, ranked no better than third in defense of his title. Bobby Riggs, the 1939 winner, heads the ranking set of eight, followed by Frank Kovacs, whose antics on the court have led several Broadway producers to wonder how he'd be in musical comedy.

A total of 62 are in the women's draw, but missing for the first time in years is the No. 1 drawing card, Alice Marble, now a pro. Pauline Betz, the skyrocketing youngster who is able to show allegiance to both California and Florida—she lives in the former but goes to school in the latter—tops the seeded list of eight. Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke, of Reno, is second, followed by Dorothy May Bundy, another of the California majority.

Mulloy Faces Wood

Ladislav Hecht, the former Czech Davis Cupper, and Valeria Scott, of England, head the men's and women's foreign rankings.

The only match that figures to prevent yawns on the opening day's men's card finds Gardner Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla., seeded eighth, tangling with Sidney Wood, the former Wimbledon champion and Davis Cupper. Miss Bundy takes on Mrs. Norma Taubele Barber, of New York, in the featured women's tussle.

Riggs meets C. Robin Hippinstiel, of San Bernardino, Calif.; Kovacs faces Bernard Welsh, of Rockville, Md., and McNeill trades shots with George A. Pryor, of Pittsburgh, in other first round men's matches.

On the women's side, Miss Betz takes the first day off and then meets Doris Hart of Miami Sunday.

Primo Carnera Turns To Wrestling Game

Rome, Aug. 29 (AP).—Primo Carnero, former world's heavyweight boxing champion, who has been acting in Italian movies since his virtual retirement from the ring, has taken up wrestling and signed with the Italian Heavy Athletic Association, which controls the sport and also boxing.

Guy Mason Threatens Washington 'Boxing'

Commissioner Warns Fistic Fraternity After 'Diving Exhibition;' Calls for Ring Clean-Up

District Commissioner Guy Mason sounded a warning yesterday that threatens a move to abolish boxing in the District of Columbia unless the sport is conducted on a higher plane.

The Commissioner voiced his disapproval at the recent Poland-Blunt affair and other matches here which "certainly give the sport a blackeye."

Mason's first reaction was to issue a blunt denunciation of professional boxing, but later tempered his remarks by stating, "if the proper authorities can clean up the situation I won't proceed with plans to take the sport out of Washington."

Says D. C. is Fistic Dump

The Commissioner added, "the District has been the dumping grounds for fights which couldn't be held in any other city. I am not opposed to boxing. As a matter of fact, I used to box in my younger days. But if the District Boxing Commission can't control the game here, we should either throw boxing out, or get a new ring body."

He spoke of the bout Wednesday night, which sports writers compared with "diving exhibitions," and lamented the fact that such match-making should be permitted to continue.

On the other hand, Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz, admittedly not a boxing fan, said as long as the people of Washington wanted boxing he would favor its continuance.

Young Says "Something" Needed

Commissioner John Russell Young, under whose jurisdiction all boxing activities falls, is a fight fan himself and is a strong advocate for the continuance of the sport. However, Commissioner Young also feels that "something" is needed in the way of approving the bouts. He once considered calling in the boxing writers of the local newspapers.

Commissioner Mason said he did not like the "type of people" boxing brings to a city, referring to the boxing game as a "suckers' game." Outside of Joe Louis, who fought here with Buddy Baer, the public has been dished out "a lot of lemons," he declared.

His last bout was the Buddy Baer-Tony Galento fiasco staged at Uline's. "I haven't been back after that one," Mason said.

Mason also denounced Promoter Mike Jacobs' monopoly.

Hudson to Face Yanks Here Today As Nats Return

Home after their most successful Western trip of the year, in which they won seven of 12 games, the Nats move into Griffith Stadium today for the start of a two-game series with the Yankees.

Manager Bucky Harris has not yet abandoned his ideas of a fifth-place finish for his last-place ball club, pointing out that the Tigers are only five games ahead at the top of the second division.

Today, Sid Hudson is Harris' pitching choice. He owns a three-game winning streak, interrupted by a 3-3 tie in a game with the Browns. Marvin Breuer, young right-hander, will pitch for the Yankees.

Rudy Mucha Signed By Cleveland Rams

Cleveland, Aug. 29 (AP).—The National Pro League Cleveland Rams are getting the services of Rudy Mucha, star center for the University of Washington 1940 football team, after all.

Mucha, the Rams' No. 1 draft choice, for a while appeared headed for the New York Yankees of the American League, but he signed a Cleveland contract at Chicago and is due at the Rams' camp today.

The 230-pounder is expected to be used as a blocking back.

Browns Score Early to Beat White Sox, 5-2

St. Louis, Aug. 29.—Excellent relief pitching by Joe Haynes came too late for the Chicago White Sox today. The Browns scored five runs off Buck Ross in the first three innings and made the quintet good for a 5 to 2 victory.

Mike Kreevich's double with the bases loaded in the fifth inning drove in both of Chicago's runs, but otherwise the Sox were held at bay by Auker.

Ross walked the head man in each of the innings he pitched and all three scored. Johnny Berardino's double with the bases loaded in the third was the coup de grace.

Lou Nova, heavyweight contender who meets Joe Louis in New York, September 29, was "smeared" when he did a little practice with the All-Star football team yesterday at Cornwall, N. Y. The All-Stars are practicing for their game with the New York Giants on September 3. From top to bottom are Frank Reagan, Penn; Al Donelli, Duquesne; Lou Ghecas, Georgetown; Walter Dubzinski, Boston; Ted Konetsky, Pitt; Bill Watson, Temple, and Nova.

Card Bosses Hold Secret Conference

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 29.—The triumvirate of the St. Louis Cardinals, one and one-half games behind first-place Brooklyn in the National League pennant race, met here today in an emergency conference which they termed strictly a "family affair."

President Sam Breadon said it involved "certain very important matters that couldn't be left until" Manager Billy Southworth returned to St. Louis.

With them was General Manager Branch Rickey.

Breadon did not describe the "important matters," but did say that "our outfield problem is serious, especially since Estel Crabtree is not a well man and just can't stand the grind of playing every day."

Southworth offered encouraging news about Terry Moore and Enos Slaughter, who recently were injured.

He said Moore was en route back to St. Louis by plane and "by the time we get there he should be ready to go to work." Slaughter, he added, is recovering rapidly and will be back in the line-up "sooner than we expected—much too soon for the comfort of Mac (Larry MacPhail, president of the Dodgers)."

'Peck' Gives Up On His Indians; Plans for 1942

By International News Service

Cleveland, Aug. 29.—Cleveland baseball fans tonight looked forward to a preview of their 1942 team.

Roger Peckinpaugh, manager of the Indians, disclosed today that he has given up on his present team, and will bring in chattels from farm clubs as fast as their seasons end, and use the minor leagues during the final month of the season.

"We can't win with what we have, so we might as well try the rookies," Peckingpaugh said.

15-Year-Old Wins Casting Championship

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 29.—Fifteen-year-old Anna Lee Crusey, of Sidney, Ohio, won the women's all-around championship of the National Fly and Bait Casting Tournament today, while Clyde Marshall, of East Liverpool, Ohio, went far into the lead for men's all-around honors.

Marshall won both the wet fly accuracy and the ⅝-ounce distance casting events to add to his first in the ⅝-ounce accuracy cast yesterday.

In gaining the all-around title, Miss Crusey won the ⅝-ounce accuracy casting event with a score of 96 after taking first in the ⅝-ounce accuracy cast yesterday and finishing fifth in the women's wet-fly contest.

Marshall and two others were tied with perfect scores of 100 in the wet fly accuracy event and it took two castoffs to determine the winner. The scores: Marshall, 100, 99, 98; C. F. Forcade, St. Louis, second, 100, 99, 95, and Walter Dunsteegt, Waukesha, Wis., third, 100, 97.

In the ⅝-ounce distance event, Marshall had an average cast of 397 2-3 feet, followed by Bob Piros, sr., St. Louis, 386½ feet, and Carl Hittenberger, San Francisco, 381 2-3.

SOME BEAR FACTS

The 98,200 folks who rimmed Soldiers Field, Chicago, the other night, now have a better understanding of what happened to the Redskins in that 73-0 affair with the Chicago Bears. In beating the College All-Stars by the biggest margin of the eight-year series at Chicago, the Bears simply threw another T-Party. They poured it on with their T-formation, like the Bears can.

POVICH

These eyes saw the Bears slam home five touchdowns and a field goal against the college boys but we wouldn't bet a Czech nickle that any other team, in the professional league could have beaten the All-Americans that night. Only the Bears, with their unstoppable T offense, could be a stand-out in the company of that college team which was, admittedly, the best ever to represent the colleges in the annual game.

The Bears came up with some new tricks for the game the other night. Either they didn't go all out in beating the Redskins by that 73-0 score last fall, or they have acquired some new frills for their attack. They didn't rely entirely on the man-in-motion play to beat the college boys. They improved their hocus with military shifts, and other stuff to hoodwink the opposition. On one play that gained ground consistently, the Bears backfield actually went into a brief huddle after the ball was snapped and then fanned out, petal-like, in all directions to the great befuddlement of the collegians.

Luckman Makes Bears Move

Finding the Bear with the ball was a game in itself for the college boys. After that, of course, was the job of stopping him. And, 230-pounders like Joe Maniaci; persistent fellows like Famiglietti, McAfee and Nolting do not stop on command. They kick up an awful fuss with their feet and shoulders when they find themselves with the ball in their hands. Particularly when they have a Bear line in front of 'em.

The man who makes the Bears move, though, is Sid Luckman. Owner-Coach George Halas is very particular about the quarterbacks for his Bears. That's why he paid a high price for Luckman who had been drafted by Brooklyn after his career at Columbia ended. Thurston himself, would have a professional envy of the magic of Luckman with a football. Hunching close to the center's posterior, he takes the ball on the snap-back on each play, and what he does with it in the next couple of seconds is usually a deep secret to the Bears' opposition.

With his backs behind him in the T-formation, Luckman is apt to hand it to any one of 'em, or keep it himself, but he masks his every movement. One football writer, in a bit of picturesque reporting, described Luckman as the package thief of football, who is never caught with the goods. He gets rid of the ball to very responsible parties, and when he chooses to drop back for a pass, one of his eligible receivers is apt to be hit in the eye with it because passing the ball is one of the best things Luckman does.

Mr. Halas, a very smart person himself, lost no time taking advantage of the new college rules permitting a coach to make substitutions at will, and without number. Luckman in fact, was playing with a recently-twisted knee, and Halas had him shuttling in and out of the lineup a dozen times during the game. When the Bears were on the defense, out came Luckman. When the Bears had the ball, in went Mr. Luckman to do his tricks with it. He was just a nice big offensive quarter back.

A Man for Every Play

Halas has a football player for every play. For his passes he has Luckman and four smart, pass catching ends in Ken Kavanaugh, Dick Plasman, George Wilson and Bob Nowaskey. For the heavy duty stuff in the backfield, he has the big and aptly-named Maniaci who could be the party of the second part in a bull ring. George McAfee and Bill Osmanski do the fancy stepping for the Bears' backfield, and Famiglietti either carries the ball or blocks with equal facility. The Bears have had the best line in pro football for years.

The proceedings against the Collegians the other night certainly offer no comfort to the other clubs in the pro league, especially the Western teams that must face the Bears twice during the season. What remains a source of wonder is how the Bears suffered three defeats during last season in the league. There was nothing phoney, either, in the games the Redskins, the Cardinals and the Detroit Lions won from the Bears last year. They were better teams than the Bears on those particular days.

At Soldiers Field the other night, the best minds of the college coaches either couldn't anticipate any defense for the Bears T-attack or were helpless when they tried. They were coaching good football players who hit as hard as the Bears, ran faster in fact, and were game enough. They simply hadn't seen the Bears' type of football before. They were beaten in their bewilderment. That of course, is no disgrace to a team of college boys. They can always point to what happened to the Redskins, who were supposed to be a pretty good professional team and supposed, also, to stop the Bears.

An End to Boxing Local Color

New York, Aug. 29.—What's happening to boxing in Europe, under the heel of Heel Hitler, shouldn't be happening to a dog. Jean Borotra, the old tennis star who turned up in Vichy as a Nazi-endorsed sports Czar, has decreed that fighters no longer can gurgle personal messages into a microphone, or kiss each other at the end of a scrap.

CONSIDINE

That should start new riots in Paris. You can take a lot away from a boxing fan, including bread, but some of them will buck and snort when you encroach on sacred tradition. Are they never again to hear "He didn't hurt me none, Mom. I'll be right home," at the end of a fight broadcast? Are they never again going to witness the inevitable sight of two bloody battlers pitching their gory woo at the conclusion of a brawl?

Our Federal Communications Commission tried to put a somewhat similar radio ban into effect a few years ago, but, of course, no one would stand for it. The F. C. C. did cut down on the likes of the late Joe Jacobs' classic, "We Wuz Robbed." But the panting fighters still get off their homey salutations, from coast to coast, and let's hope they always will. There's something reassuring about ". . . Puff . . . It certainly was a hard puff fight puff. Sure I'll give him puff a return fight puff. Hello everybody puff at home puff."

A Year Will Be Much Too Soon

"There's something right about that, even if those post-fight declarations sometimes backfire, as was the case the night Georgie Abrams beat Billy Goose and said at the end of his message to the folk, "and I'll certainly buy a lot of them Gem Razors." It was a nice, generous thing for him to say, even on the Gillette program.

It's a funny thing about fistic osculation. If two tennis players rushed to the net to embrace and slobber over each other, they'd be run out of the community by a posse of outraged males. The same would be true of two golfers, ball players, hockey players, football players, etc. But the sight of two battered hulks embracing, and giving each other puff-lipped smacks, after trying to belt out each other's brains, is okay. It may be a funny world, this sports world, but not many of us want it revised by the likes of Borotra and his bosses.

Speaking of the Nazis, Max Schmeling, in an interview with Pierre Huss, says that he would like to 'chute down on a New York airport "and pull a Crete on Mike Jacobs." He thinks he'll be doing that, en route to a return fight against Joe Louis, "in about a year."

We have an idle hunch that Max will be about 50 years old, and that Louis will have been a former champion for about 15 years, before the sight of Schmeling descending on a New York airport by parachute will be quite acceptable to the citizens.

More of the 'Cosmic Forehand'

The irrepressible Frank Kovacs, the crack California tennis crackpot, has developed what he calls a "cosmic forehand" and expects to use it at Forest Hills tomorrow when he and the rest of the outstanding semiamateurs open play in the annual national singles.

That just about cooks Kovac's goose in the tournament, if the "cosmic forehand" is anything like he described it to a news service reporter the other day. Seems that he faces the net and keeps the right foot a little forward while making the shot. . . .ny player can deliver a forehand in that position, but it would be bound to be a feeble shot. It would be like trying to bat a baseball while straddling the plate and facing the pitcher. If he goes in for anything like that he won't last three rounds, and that would be a stunning blow to the tennis officials who seeded him second, ahead of national champion Don McNeill, in the hope that he'll last at least to the finals. He is the only drawing card in the semiamateur end of the sport.

Kovacs was talking about McNeill to a friend recently. "You know," he said, "I'm almost as disappointed in that fellow as I am in myself."

P. S.—Wonder how the Army had strength enough to turn down Dick Chapman's suggestion that he, Porky Oliver, etc., make a golf tour of the different Army camps? . . . The Washington Senators and St. Louis Browns fear that the old master, Connie Mack, will dream up some intricate incompetence and run away with last place honors . . . about this time. I'd say, nobody cares what becomes of the American Football League.

Whitney Horses Head Hopeful Stakes Field

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 29. Tomorrow's $42,000 Hopeful, getaway day feature of historic Saratoga track's August season, finds the Whitneys enjoying as nice and friendly a family feud as even the Whitneys could wish.

Shooting for its sixth victory this season in the Spa's traditional two-year-old classics, racing's number one family has entered five of the eight horses named for the thirty-seventh running of the Hopeful. Three are coupled as overnight betting favorites—Mrs. Payne Whitney's Shut Out and Devil Diver and Mrs. Charles Shipman Payson's Amphitheatre.

Also carrying Whitney colors in this rich 6½-furlong event are Jock Whitney's Buster, winner of the United States Hotel Stakes, and C. V. Whitney's Coat of Arms, highly regarded son of Equipoise. Shut Out and Amphitheatre are top-weight under 122 pounds, and Devil Diver gets in at 119 and Coat of Arms, a maiden, at 112.

Tabbed as the colt most likely to break the family monopoly on the race is Walter P. Chrysler, jr.'s long-striding Ramilles, second in his only two starts. Ramilles worked 6 furlongs in 1:13 flat over a dead track Wednesday, only three-fifths of a second off Shut Out's winning time in last Saturday's Grand Union.

Ramilles, also a maiden, will carry 112 pounds with George D. Widener's Equalize and William Ziegler jr.'s Wait A Bit completing the field. Both must carry 116 pounds.

Co-feature is the $10,000 added Saratoga cup at a mile and three quarters. William Woodward's Fenelon, under 126 pounds including Jockey Jimmy Stout, is the even money favorite with the Woodvale Farm's Plodding Dorimar, at 121, the second choice.

Others in the five horse field are W. E. Goeing's Welcome Pass, 116, the Foxcatcher Farm's Fairymant, 116, and Conn Smythe's Second Helping, 121. Five other races complete the card.

Hogan Nears Hershey Open Record With 10-Under-Par 136

Shoots a 67 Second Day To Hold Lead

Mangrum 2 Strokes Back in $5000 Play; Worsham Only D. C. Entry With Chance

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Hershey, Pa., Aug. 29.—Another half-dozen birdies rolled off the red-hot sticks of Benny Hogan today and at the halfway mark of the $5000 Hershey Open Chmapionship the host professional had a two-stroke lead and looked like a cinch to break Henry Pickard's tournament record of 280.

Hogan, leading scorer, top money winner and big-name golfer of the year, again played the par 37 back nine in 32 strokes. He added a 67 to his opening 69 for a 136 total, ten under par for two rounds over one of the longest championship layouts in the Nation.

In the place position and a strong contender for the $1200 first-prize money with two rounds to go was Lloyd Mangrum, the good-looking golf pro, who came within inches of a hole-in-one in the eighteenth hole and finished with a 68 for 138.

The Washington delegation was just about out of the running for the championship, but Lewis Worsham, jr., the Burning Tree pro, was in a good spot to finish in the money as he added a one-over-par 74 to his opening 72 and was the lone exact par shooter in the field. Worsham holed only one birdie putt in contrast to his four of the first round, but he had 15 pars and was over par on just two holes.

Spencer Cards 149

Cliff Spencer, who fits right in with the big-timers here with his long hitting and Dapper Dan outfits, was one of the day's dozen par-breakers with a 72, but his opening 77 left him well back with 149. Five of the eight District entrants qualified for the second half of the tournaments with scores of 157 or better.

Sammy Snead, always the gallery attraction, was one of three tied for third place with a 141. The Virginian was in a stormy mood as he went over par on the eighteenth, but he still finished with a fine 69. His company was Denny Shute, playing consistently good golf with 70-71, and Terl Johnson, the little man with the big mustache from Norristown, Pa., with like rounds.

Hogan's six-under par round was plenty good but was only the second lowest effort of the day. Jack Grout, assistant to Henry Picard here for years, came within a stroke of his former boss' all-time course record with a great 66. The bespectacled pro couldn't miss with his putter as he paired 33s.

Grout's poor opening attempt left him tied at 143 with big Clayton Heafner, coleader yesterday but a 74-shooter today. Johnny Bulla, Chicago, who added 68 to 75, Horton Smith, the putting master from Pinehurst with 70-73, Gene Kunes and W. A. Stackhouse.

Others with sub-par scores for 36 holes were: Felix Serefin, defending titlist and Henry Nettleblatt, coleader Thursday with 144, and George Fazio at 145 with Sammy Byrd and two of the Turnesas, Joe and Mike.

Dick Chapman, the 1940 national amateur champion, took a horrible three-over par six on the eighteenth and finished with a 149 count. Chapman, trapped from the tee, hit an explosion shot too clean and it carried under a low-limbed tree far over the green. His playing partner, Washington's Leo Walper, improved his opening round with a 74 which included a double-bogey six on the eighth hole. Walper posted 14 pars, one other bogey and a pair of birdies.

Spencer's Rally Is Highlight

Spencer's rally was the day's feature of the boys from old D. C. The East Potomac pro was three over regulation figures for four holes but he rammed home a pair of 15 footers for birdies to be out in 37, one over. Starting at the eleventh Cliff had three birdies in a row, all from short putts, and with par for a 71 coming to 17 he gambled for a birdie but went over par for his 72.

Worsham, pushing for birdies on the par fives on the front nine, took sixes on both but got one stroke back with an easy birdie putt on thirteenth. The feature of his 15 pars was the fifteenth where he holed a curling 25 footer.

Al Houghton added anothter 76, going four over par on the last five holes with straying iron shots. Al Treder, of Manor, was the other District qualifier with 79-78—157, including several three-putt greens after birdie attempts. Bob Barnett had two bad holes to miss the grade by a shot with a pair of 79's, while Freddie Bolton was just out with 81-77, although he hit the ball well today. John Brooks, Burning Tree amateur, had 88-82.

Four-Yard Gain in Post School 'Touch' Grid Game

Capping a highly successful two-week session, The Washington Post grid school came to an end yesterday with a game of "touch" football. Here Paul Blaine, Anacostia High back who starred for the "Shirtless Wonders" against the "Blearies," picks up yardage on a running play in the second quarter. The game ended in a 0-0 deadlock

Ki Aldrich Out of Drill With Injury

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 29.—Ki Aldrich, former all-American center at Texas Christian, pulled a muscle in his right leg and may be missing from the Redskins' "all-out" scrimmage scheduled for tomorrow. Aldrich was running in full stride when he went lame and had to be assisted from the field. The center, traded to the Redskins by the Chicago Cards for Jimmy Johnston, joined a group of sore-legged gridmen that now includes Bob McChesney, Ed Justice and John Stonebreaker.

Coach Ray Flaherty gave his charges only light work today. Scrimmage tomorrow will be the first of the training season with regulation equipment. Heretofore scrimmages have been staged only with the defense wearing thick, heavy blocking pads to take up the shocks.

Today's drill was staged in shorts. Passing, kicking, signal work and exercises were on the program. Starting Monday the "East" and "West" squads, which will battle the following Saturday at Balboa Stadium here, will work separately.

Lee Gentry, former Tulsa U. quarterback, was out for the afternoon drill today despite the fact that he had two abscessed teeth extracted this morning. Gentry has been ailing since practice began and Trainer Doc Mauro believes the teeth were the cause.

Jack Banta, star halfback for Southern California last year, failed to fly in from Chicago where he competed in the Bears-All-Stars game last night. Coach Flaherty expects him to put in appearance tomorrow. The arrival of Banta will complete the squad.

Georgetown Branch Issues Football Call

Georgetown Branch, of the Boys Club of Washington, has issued a call for all its football players to report at the first practice session on Tuesday. From then on the 90 and 105 pounders will drill Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and 120 and 135 pounders on Tuesdays and Thursdays. The latter class is recent addition, taking in all boys under 18 years of age.

Post's First Football School Closes Successful Sessions

Nearly 100 Schoolboys Received Training Under Coaches Fox, O'Leary, Ehrlich

By Bill Burnett

Tanned by two weeks of daily exposure to the sun, their bodies hardened by bruising workouts, and their minds well-stocked on the fundamentals of football, almost 100 schoolboy gridmen yesterday wound up a thoroughly satisfactory first run of The Washington Post football school.

The "touch" grid game which marked the final session at Eastern High Stadium, proved the even status of the groups into which the squad was split for the final day's attraction. The "Shirtless Wonders" and "Bleary Eyes," coached by Sam Fox and Jim O'Leary, respectively, came to the end of four quarters of bitter struggle in a 0-0 deadlock.

Neither team came seriously close to scoring, though the Wonders reached their foes' 8-yard line at one point in the second period. A 30-yard pass, from Central's Johnny Ward to Viking teammate Bob Hill put the ball within reach of the line.

Penalty Stops Advance

The advance ended there, however, as a 5-yard penalty for too much time in the huddle, set the Wonders back. They lost the ball soon afterward and Charley Voigt, of the Blearies, kicked out of danger.

As a result of final hostilities and their observations throughout the school, Coaches Fox, O'Leary and abe Ehrlich named the following students outstanding: Jim Kurz, Central, end, best all - around player; Charley Hughes, Eastern tackle, most improved player; Jack Samperton, Central end, most aggressive; Ward, Central halfback, best passer; Voigt, Wilson fullback, best punter, and Bill Voigt, St. Ann's center, most promising.

Three new regulation footballs, donated by The Washington Post, were drawn for by lots. The lucky winners were Bill Morrison, former West Virginia schoolboy star; Sam Gimble, Eastern tackle, and Martin Bandler, Eastern halfback.

No Injuries

Despite a serious effort on the part of both teams yesterday, as well as of players during practice throughout The Post school, no injuries were suffered. And all observers predicted the scholastic season would be marked by infinitely

Bell-Coached Steelers Have Speedy Backs

By the Associated Press

Hershey, Pa., Aug. 29.—The last National Professional Football league team Bert Bell coached—the Philadelphia Eagles—couldn't run through anyone, so this year's edition of the Bell technique, the Pittsburgh-Penn Steelers, proposes to run around 'em.

Bell, talkative ex-Penn star has lined up a backfield for the Steelers that he believes should go places and the first test will be next Monday against the Detroit Lions in an exhibition.

Three of the four starting backs can do 100 yards in 10 seconds or better, says Bell, and if they can't run around the opposition, no one can.

The Steelers' hopes are pinned on Art Jones, Richmond University star, who, Bell says, can run the century in 9.8; Elmer Hackney, Kansas State and Francis Maher, Toledo University, who are 10-second men, and Jack Noppenberg, Miami, veteran blocking back.

With this backfield he plans to use a veteran line.

The Steelers broke training camp today after weeks of workouts in the Hershey Stadium and returned to Pittsburgh to get set for actual competition.

Cameo Nine to Play Three Weekend Games

Cameo Furniture nine is scheduled to play three games this weekend with the Keyser (W. Va.) A. C., one tomorrow and a doubleheader Monday. The action winds up Cameo's play for the season. Players will leave tomorrow morning from Tenth and H Streets Northwest, at 8 a.m.

Miss Guilfoil Enters Finals InMason-Dixon

By the Associated Press

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Aug. 29.—Four birdies on the first five holes gave blonde Virginia Guilfoil a 5 and 4 victory over Mrs. J. H. Heim of Kane, Pa., today, and entry into the 36-hole finals of the Mason-Dixon golf tournament tomorrow.

In the other bracket, Dorothy Gardner of Steubenville, Ohio, fought off the game comeback attempt of Mary Fine Capers of Haverford, Pa., to win 1 up on the eighteenth and capture the other finals berth.

Miss Guilfoil, New York State champion, will take permanent possession of the $400 gold tournament cup if she defeats Miss Gardner tomorrow.

Mrs. Helm first went ahead on the second hole when Miss Guilfoil failed to put her tee shot home, but went one down when she required sixes on the fourth and fifth. She lost the eighth and won the ninth, and Miss Guilfoil was one up at the turn.

Then the New Yorker started. A birdie three on the 10th, a birdie four on the 11th, a par five on the uphill 12th, a 33-foot putt for a birdie on the 13th and a final one-under-par on the 14th for the match.

Birdies also played a big part in the Gardner-Capers match, which Miss Capers might have won had she not three-putted on the 17th.

First Flight—Mrs. John Gofrey, Washington, defeated Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, Washington, 3 and 1; Miss Anne Mitcke, Ruxton, Md., defeated Miss Marguerite Cemin, Forest Hills, N. Y., 5 and 4.

Second Flight—Mrs. M. Maxwell, Chevy Chase, Md., defeated Mrs. R. F. Reed, Cleveland, 2 and 1; Mrs. V. C. Smith, Charleston, defeated Mrs. S. M. Huffard, Bluefield, 8 and 6.

Third Flight—Mrs. W. J. Benner, Rocky River, Ohio, defeated Miss Miriam Conley, Coledo, 1 up, on nineteenth hole; Mrs. B. H. McLaughlin, Warren, Pa., defeated Mrs. C. C. Wright, Moundsville, 6 and 5.

Fourth Flight—Mrs. R. T. Hambleton, Pittsburgh, defeated Miss Ruth Jenkins, Monongahela, Pa., 6 and 4; Mrs. Frank Doran, Lakewood, Ohio, defeated Mrs. William Tevano, Pittsburgh, 8 and 6.

Fifth Flight—Mrs. C. H. Girt, Pittsburgh, defeated Mrs. H. R. Harper, Washington, 3 and 2; Mrs. Alfred Paul, Bethesda, Md., defeated Mrs. Ralph Guilfoil, Syracuse, N. Y.

Final, Final City Sandlot Playoff Today

Their first defeat in the city sandlot baseball tournament was suffered by the Heurich Brewers, defending champions, yesterday as Naval Air Station nine ground out a 9-5 victory on the Ellipse.

The result left the city title and a trip to the National Amateur Baseball Federation tournament in Youngstown, O., hinging on another clash of the clubs on the East Ellipse today. Starting time will be 3 p. m.

As action started yesterday it appeared the Brewers, champions of the Washington Post - Industrial League, would take their third straight D. C. crown without a struggle. They jumped on Horace Meyers, of V. A. S., for three runs in the opening inning, knocking him from the box.

Knights Triple Helps

Al Kidwell started with a single, was sacrificed to second by Barry, Posnack walked and Stahl singled Kidwell home. Knight's triple sent Posnack and Stahl over the plate and Meyers to the bench. John Fairley took over and retired the side.

Naval Air came right back to knot matters in the first. Nichols walked and stole second. Daniel singled and also stole, and Sheppard scored both with a hit to left. Sheppard was caught off first, but Dunn walked to keep the rally alive. Dunn was out stealing, but Korab again kept things alive with a double. Anthony's single was all it took to tie the count at 3-3.

Though Heurich took a one-run lead in the second inning, on successive singles by Brewer and Colliere, Fairley's balk and the same player's misplay of Barry's grounder, it didn't last long. Five Naval Air tallies in the third clinched things.

Thus All Five Runs

Ed Colliflower walked both Nichols and Daniels to start the frame, then took a walk for himself. Downes went in, gave singles to Sheppard, Dunn and Weller and a base on balls to Korab. Along with errors by Miller and Barry, that accounted for all five runs.

In all Naval Air registered 13 safeties, while Heurich could collect only seven.

Franck Is Named 'Most Valuable' Among All-Stars

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 29.—George Franck, former Minnesota halfback and All-America, today was named the most valuable player of the College All-Stars, who were defeated, 37 to 13, by the Chicago Bears, professional champions, in last night's preview of the 1941 football season.

Franck scored one of the Collegians' touchdowns and was the spark plug of the All-Stars' attack until he was removed from the game in the third period because of a shoulder injury. He will be awarded a trophy during the 1942 All-Star contest.

The Bears, scoring in each period of last night's game and three times in the final quarter, chalked up the third consecutive professional victory in the eight-year All-Star series. The professionals now have won four of the contests, the Collegians two, and two have been ties.

Del Baker Re-Signed As Detroit Manager

Owner Briggs Sets Precedent Drawing Contract This Soon

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 29.—Owner Walter O. Briggs, of the Detroit Tigers, gave a vote of confidence today to Manager Del Baker by signing him to a one-year contract, terms of which were undisclosed.

In a surprise meeting Briggs called Baker into his office before the Detroit club left for Cleveland to open a three-game series tomorrow. Then a stroke of the pen scratched out all insistent reports that Baker was to be replaced.

The slender Baker grinned broadly when he emerged from Briggs' office and said he was most happy to remain with the Detroit organization which he has served for more than a decade.

Signing Sets Precedent

The signing at this time represented a departure of the Briggs custom of reaching terms with his managers at the end of the season. In the face of prevailing rumors that Baker was to be fired, Briggs only recently announced he would wait until the 1941 season's end before making a decision on the managership.

Even last year, when Baker piloted the Tigers to the American League pennant, Briggs waited until a day before the World Series to announce retention of Baker.

Briggs' only comment today was that he had considered no one else as a possible successor to the 49-year-old pilot.

"Due to the fact that there has been so much publicity about this matter," Briggs declared, "we wish to announce that there has been no one asked to manage this club but Del Baker."

Possible Successors Named

In the rumors that made the rounds when the Detroit club fell from its lofty 1940 position into the second division of the current race, Manager Jimmy Dykes of the Chicago White Sox, Coach Steve O'Neill, of the Tigers, and Ex-manager Oscar Vitt, of the Cleveland Indians, were mentioned most prominently as possible Baker successors.

Baker, meantime, maintained silence, but indicated by deed that he would keep working diligently for the Detroit club this season, regardless of his employer's ultimate decision.

"I'm glad to stay in Detroit," said Baker before he left for Cleveland, "but there would have been no complaint had the situation been otherwise. I've been in baseball long enough to know that you have to win to hold a job, and this has been my worst year."

Developed Big Stars

Baker, a native of Sherwood, Oreg., played minor league baseball for 18 years and spent three seasons (1914-1916) in Detroit as second string catcher. His major league batting mark was .208.

In 1930, he became manager of Beaumont of the Texas League, chief source of Detroit playball talent, and developed such players as Hank Greenberg, Schoolboy Rowe and Pete Fox. When the players moved up with the Tigers in 1933, so did Baker, as coach to Manager Bucky Harris.

Baker, third-base coach under Manager Mickey Cochrane, moved up into Cochrane's job in 1938 when the club finished fourth the following year, Baker's first full season as manager, the Tigers were fifth.

Old Carlisle Indians Hold First Reunion

Pop Warmer 'Wows' 'Em at Gathering; Plan Alumni Group

By the Associated Press

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 29.—Football Coach Glenn S. (Pop) Warner, who once attributed his success at Carlisle Indian School to the fact that it had no alumni association, had some 200 old grads so enthusiastic today that they belatedly prepared to organize one.

He was honor guest at what amounted to the first Carlisle reunion ever held, a quarter century after the college closed its doors. The event lent a genuinely old home week flavor to the New York State Fair's annual "Indian day" program.

Gray-haired men, Carlisle's red and gold fluttering from lapels, pushed through Warner's escort at the fair Indian village exhibit and pummeled his back in joyous welcome. Timid matrons edged up to shake hands and identify themselves as Carlisle coeds of 1902, 1908, 1914.

"My," Warner exclaimed, "I haven't seen some of these boys in 40 years. And I've never seen so many at once since leaving the school."

That was in 1915. Pop's been at Stanford and Temple since.

Little Adam Spring, a Tonawanda Seneca, whooped at his old coach from a bark booth where novelties were on sale.

"I haven't seen you since you were running around in those short pants," Warner said to Spring, a great track man in '99 and 1900.

"Well, I'd be in a lot better shape now if you hadn't made me run so much," retorted Spring, who must be 65, and is spry.

Big Ike Lyon, now a staid Onondaga chief, who, with Jim Thorpe, ranks in Warner's mind as one of the two greatest football backs of all time, beamed as he showed the coach around.

"Ike didn't know what a football looked like when he came to Carlisle," Warner remarked. "He made the team the first year, and I couldn't get him off it after that."

Adam Spring reminded Warner of the time Carlisle's track team met Bucknell on the fifth-mile Bucknell track.

"Remember," he said, "how I finished eight laps of that 2-mile race and then ran into the clubhouse thinking I'd won? And how you ran after me to bring me back, and I finished the last two laps and won anyway?"

Mrs. Southworth Wins Blind Bogey

Mrs. W. W. Southworth and Mrs. D. E. Lee tied for top honors in the weekly blind bogey tournament at Washington Golf and Country Club yesterday and the former won in the draw. Both posted 76. Next prize went to Mrs. Harold Smith with a 77. Mrs. R. D. Young was next with 80. Mrs. R. L. Hutchison captured low putt honors for the month of August.

Mrs. Murray Wins

Mrs. Frank Murray captured the ladies' flag tourney at Congressional yesterday by planting her flag on the eighteenth green with a 109 and handicap. Mrs. Arnold McNitt posted 100 on the seventeenth green. Low putt honors were taken by Mrs. Mervin Johnston.

California Girl Wins Singles, Shares In Doubles Crown

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 29.—Louise Brough, top-ranking girls' tennis player of the Nation, won her second straight National Girls' title today, and then paired with another Californian to dethrone the defending doubles champion in final matches of the annual tournament at the Philadelphia Cricket Club.

This 18-year-old Beverly Hills star conquered Doris Hart, of Miami, Fla., in the singles final, 7—5, 6—2, and teamed with Gertrude Moran, of Santa Monica, to defeat Miss Hart and Nellie Sheer, of Miami Beach, Fla., 7—5, 4—6, 9—7, for the doubles title.

Miss Brough's hard drives and steadiness were the deciding factors in the singles match. Trailing 4—3 in the first set, she evened the count, lost the next game and then put on the pressure to sweep the next three for the set. Miss Hart's errors cost her heavily in the second set.

"INSIDE STUFF" ABOUT THE BOTTLED BEER YOU BUY !

When we first planned NATIONAL BOHEMIAN BEER we naturally wanted to brew a beer which would make many friends and sell very well indeed.

We knew the dealers were being offered many beers at different prices.

If we brewed "just another beer," why should folks turn to it? If we undertook to brew a "cut-price" beer which the dealer could buy for a still lower price than some others, where would the quality be which would get and hold friends?

So the answer was: "We'll go in the other direction—we'll brew the finest possible beer of this popular type—and even though it will cost more to brew, we will say to the fair-minded dealer:

"'Will you pay a little more money for a really fine beer which you can sell for a dime a bottle? It will make you a little less profit—but you will surely be giving your trade great quality!'"

Ever so many dealers are glad to do this—so that is why, ALL OVER WASHINGTON, THERE ARE QUALITY-MINDED DEALERS WHO ARE PAYING MORE FOR NATIONAL BOHEMIAN THAN FOR ANY OTHER TEN-CENT BOTTLED BEER THEY BUY—paying the top price to give you top quality.

Butterman Beats Out Favored Last Bet in Marlboro Feature

Dan Scocca Brings Home A 'Triple'

Washington Jockey Wins Feature Race Opener and Sixth Events on Program

By Clocker Mike

Marlboro, Md., Aug. 29.—The La Plata Purse, fifth and feature event on the day's card, saw a mediocre bunch of sprinters answer the call and the winner turned up in Mrs. N. E. Stanton's Butterman. The 5-year-old son of Peter Hastings reached the wire a length clear of the favored Last Bet, half of the G. G. Waugh, jr., entry. Pompey's Folly, an 80-1 shot, was third in the limit field going 5½ furlongs.

Butterman, which lost all chance of winning his last start when Berwyn carried him to the outside fence, had no interference today. Danny Scocca, Washington jockey, who rode three winners today, sent him right to the van and when they had taken the first turn he was well in front of Last Bet., Scocca, however, did not let up on the veteran and it's a good thing he didn't. When they entered the stretch, Last Bet again felt the sting of Hernandez's whip and once again set sail for the leader. However, Butterman was not to be denied and held on to the end. Pompey's Folly, after being shuffled back in the early stages, was taken to the extreme outside and closed like an express train to be third.

The fans, some 5,000, turned out to witness the card, overlooked the winner and sent the cash in on the entry, due mostly to Last Bet's recent second to Happy Lark. The winner closed at 4-1 and returned an even $10.

Scocca rounded out a triple by taking the sixth event aboard My Exit, a $5.90 shot. The Washington boy got off on the right foot when he won the opening race with Chief Cherokee, paying a $4.90 ticket.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHIEF CHEROKEE, $4.90, $3.10, $3.30; SCATALONE, $4.70, $3.70; BARRACA, $2.80.

CHIEF CHEROKEE, well up from the start, moved around the leader entering the stretch and won in going away fashion. SCATALONE moved with a rush to reach the leaders, took command on the stretch turn, but could not resist the winner. BARRACA was off slowly, came around the entire field and hung in the final quarter. WINGED PHARIAN closed with good speed after being outrun for a half.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 2:41. Off at 2:41½. Winner, W. E. Laboyteaux's br. or blk. g. (3), by St. James—Pandowdy. Trained by J. M. Black. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:26.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLOCKADER, $8.40, $5.70, $4.10; SCOUT ABOUT, $6.90, $4.30; PARADISE GIRL, $3.20.

BLOCKADER took command when asked and drew clear to win easily. SCOUT ABOUT was in close quarters on the rail early, moved after a half, but could not threaten the winner. PARADISE GIRL ran well in the last quarter. JAMES PAL caught tired horses in the stretch. DUPLIKET tired early.

Daily Double—CHIEF CHEROKEE and BLOCKADER Paid $45.30.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:14. Off at 3:14½. Winner, Claude Feliner's ch. f. (3), by Whiskalons—Fair Rosamond. Trained by Claude Feliner. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:11⅘.

MYRTLE M.	(Haber)	114	6	8	8	7h	7h	8	8	13.85

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIR FLAME, $7.40, $4.30, $3.90; SUN MAKER, $16.00, $8.70; TOVARICH, $6.00.

FAIR FLAME was taken back going into the first turn, moved up gradually to take command entering the stretch, but was forced to a hard drive to stave off the bid of SUN MAKER. The latter improved her position steadily and was wearing the winner down. TOVARICH had good early speed, but weakened in the last eighth. LUCKY NUMBER closed well. MYRTLE M. was almost knocked down at the first turn.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:45. Off at 3:47. Winner, N. Derby's b. g. (6), by Delaside II—Star Blaze. Trained by R. K. Auld. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:21⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DEODO, $6.60, $4.20, $3.10; SILVER PICK, $67.00, $10.30; DANCING CLOUD, $4.20.

DEODO went by CUT EMERALD on the backstretch, opened a commanding lead, but was all out to withstand the bid of SILVER PICK. The latter moved up boldly after being off sharply, came to the outside of the leader and was gradually wearing him down. DANCING CLOUD lacked speed for a half and then came with good courage. CUT EMERALD had good speed for a half and then faltered.

FIFTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $600; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but ELTONHEAD. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:21. Off at 4:24. Winner, Mrs. N. E. Stanton's b. h. (5), by Peter Hastings—Kitten M. Trained by J. P. Phillips. Value to winner, $420; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:09

ELTONHEAD	(Rose)	120	5	6	8	8	8	8	8	3.55

†G. O. Waugh, jr., entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUTTERMAN, $10.00, $3.90, $3.10; LAST BET (entry), $2.60, $2.30; POMPEY'S FOLLY, $7.70.

BUTTERMAN took command approaching the first turn, widened his margin gradually, but was all out to win. LAST BET raced with the winner in the opening quarter and was always closest. POMPEY'S FOLLY was shuffled back at the first turn, went to the outside and came with good courage in the stretch run. CASTEL was closer than usual in the early stages and then faltered.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place easily. Went to post at 4:38. Off at 4:36. Winner, H. Kerr's b. g. (4), by Mowlee—Seldom Seen. Trained by M. Kerr. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:59.

YUM YUM	(Haber)	114	6	7	8	8	8	8	8	99.45

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MY EXIT, $5.90, $3.60, $2.70; SECOND BEST, $4.70, $3.50; LADY MOWLEE, $3.50.

MY EXIT was allowed to settle into his best stride while well in hand for a half, went around the leaders and won in handy fashion. SECOND BEST took command at once, turned back the challenge of LADY MOWLEE, held on well, but was no match for the winner. LADY MOWLEE moved up to challenge after a half, but was not good enough. MEDDLING MAC closed with a belated rush. RAYLIGHT was worn out chasing the leader in the first half. YUM YUM was sloughed at the first turn.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:05. Off at 5:31. Winner, F. A. Hall's br. f. (4), by Woodvale—Pagnetta. Trained by F. Lawrence. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:57.

CARLE CHICK	(Garrett)	113	6	4	7h	7h	8	8	8	88.70

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NETTA WOOD, $16.00, $5.30, $3.70; TONIANNA, $3.10, $2.50; MAFUTA, $6.60.

NETTA WOOD, within striking distance from the start, moved on the outside of the leader entering the stretch and wore her down in a hard drive. TONIANNA was bumped by SETTLER after a half, took the lead entering the stretch, fought it out willingly, but could not resist the winner. MAFUTA raced well in the late stages. SETTLER showed speed, MAEVAKE had speed to the stretch, went very wide and was cased up in the stretch.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 6:04. Off at 6:04. Winner, W. Elliott's b. m. (6), by Theatrical—Little Susie. Trained by P. C. Stephenson. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:51.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ACTRESS, $8.90, $3.70, $4.40; BROOKE HERROD, $4.30, $3.40; JOE D., $9.30.

ACTRESS was well in hand for a half, responded when placed to pressure and took command to be going easily at the end. BROOKE HERROD was passed about at the first turn and then came well thereafter. JOE D. was well up from the start and held on gamely. LYDE opened a long early lead and then faltered.

Selections at Marlboro

Dear Al:

At long last I received a letter from Walter Haight. He had to admit that he missed the race tracks, even if it was the halfers. By the way, don't write and ask him for any money. He went to Del Mar Tuesday. I think we all agree that it will be good to get him back. With today being the final day of the local meeting, the S. R. O. sign should be very much in evidence. Only here it doesn't mean Standing Room Only. Instead, Showing Room Only. A. F. Martinez, who led the riders here last year, and was injured earlier this week, was a visitor yesterday and said he is feeling fine. Thomas C. Bradley, representative steward for the West Virginia Racing Commission, is recovering from an operation which was performed earlier in the week. Bradley is resting at his home in Lexington, Ky. Greg Johnson received a wire from Race Secretary Freddie Burton stating that the condition books for the Pascoag, R. I. meeting which opens September 29, will be distributed during the Timonium meeting. When thinking of champions that performed during the Marlboro meeting, don't forget the champion bad luck horse. That dubious honor must go to J. Pedrosa's My Dottie. The 3-year-old daughter of Twink started twice at the meeting. The first time, she was caught in close quarters and unseated her rider. The second time, she was just making her move when she broke her leg and was destroyed. If you find one with worse luck than that, don't tell me about it, write Ripley. There were two claims on Thursday's card. Mrs. M. McNey took Glitter Girl and then lost Tyr to W. C. Bell. Jockey Sammy Palumbo reported sick yesterday and canceled his mounts for the day. That seems to be a habit with Sammy now. Eddie Dennison was the old reliable here today. The rest of the office force went to Timonium to take care of the entries, while Eddie stayed here and handled the scratches. Jockey Beverley Hacker, long a favorite on the Maryland tracks, was a visitor yesterday and states that he will ride all of Johnny Forbes' horses during the Maryland season. Hacker will also accept mounts at Timonium. Here goes our last chance at this track for another year.

BILL.

First race—HAPPY HOSTESS is dropping down a peg for this race and I believe she has found a spot to earn brackets. ACE OF TRUMPS has a good race here and will be a factor. DABS will be a good price and might be dangerous.

Second race—It's a lot of speed in this race and I believe that SCOOTIE may come from behind and take it all. CHANCER'S race Thursday was a pip and a repeater could mean the winner's share. BRAINCHILD was a breezing winner last out.

Third race—I've been trying to STEEL BEAM to start all meeting and it loks like she has to win a race like this. TACARO LILLY reached peak form in winning that last and seems to be the chief contender. SWEET ZACA has plenty of speed.

Fourth race—DASHING DOE was beaten by HIBLAZE the last time out but I think the tables will be turned today. The top one receives a little weight shift that should decide the issue. BERWYN showed a good race last out and should be no worse than third.

Fifth race—PETIT FOURS has won two in a row in such promising style that I am forced to go back to her. Was last for a half mile in her last race and came on to win. JOAN ASBESTOS has two good wins over a distance and will be tough. ROUGH GOING for the show.

Sixth race—This is a bad race but if TRANSDAY runs back to Thursday's effort it should mean a win. BEACON QUEEN is going a distance for the first time but figures close. MISS MUD was second last out.

Seventh race—BULL TERRIER was sent 5½ furlongs in preparation for this and showed enough to warrant top selection. WINTONA almost beat JOAN ASBESTOS last out and is a factor. GIMPEY should go well.

Eighth race—CURVES is a tough horse to ride but if Woody Kirk can find a little racing room on the rail, I believe he will be aboard the winner. BRILLIANT ONE will improve with a change of riders. OFFICIATE is far down on the eligible list but must be given a chance if started.

Best bet—DASHING DOE.

Who Calls Scores First Victory for W. E. Boeing Stable

By the Associated Press

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 29.—claimed early in the month for $4500, a two-year-old colt named Who Calls won his first victory for W. E. Boeing today as he scored by half a length over J. A. Anderson's Jack's Girl in Narragansett Park's featured Hillsgrove purse.

A length separated Jack's Girl and Miss Wendy Adam's Irish Ivy.

The Stone brother's Sonny Casey beat the six other juveniles out of the gate, but Who Calls raced up quickly to take over command going down the backstretch.

Who Calls covered the six furlongs in 1:13 and paid $4.40, $3.10 and $2.40. Jack's Girl returned $7.90, $4.40 with Irish Ivy paying $3.00.

Four Utilities In D. C. Report July Earnings

One Washington utility yesterday reported increased earnings in July, one reported a slump in income and two showed a net loss.

A gain was reported by the Potomac Electric Power Co., Washington Gas Light Co. and Capital Transit Co. reported losses, while Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. showed reduced income. The itemized statements, as condensed from the monthly reports filed with the Public Utilities Commission, follow:

Gas Net Loss Reduced

Washington Gas Light Co. showed operating revenues of $532,793, an increase of $30,015 over July last year. Operating expenses were $20,544 higher than last year, amounting to $499,201. Non-operating income increased $8,237 to a total of $32,199, and income deductions show a decrease of $1,652 for the month. The net result of operations for July was an improvement of $16,958 over last year, although the final figure was a small seasonal deficit both this year and last.

Net income for the first seven months of this year amounted to $1,034,702, compared with $1,055,528 for the same period in 1940. The reduction of $20,686 was attributed to higher taxes, which increased approximately $168,000 during the same period.

The report also showed gas sales of 763,194 M. (thousands) cubic feet for the month, compared with 698,956 M. cubic feet for July last year. There were 171,168 meters in service in the District of Columbia on July 31, an increase of 7 per cent over last year.

Pepco Net Rises 10.2%

Potomac Electric Power Co., reported net earnings in July totaled $312,440 an increase of $28,916 or 10.2 per cent over the same month last years.

Pepco's operating revenues in July totaled $1,571,802, a gain of $222,853 or 16.5 per cent over last year. Operating expenses were $80,749 more than a year ago and took $64,491 more than last year.

For the first seven months Pepco's net income totaled $2,495,017, a gain of 5.7 per cent over last year. Operating revenues increased $953,352 for the seven month period.

Transit Firm Shows Loss

A 129 per cent increase in taxes was the main factor in the Capital Transit Co. reporting a net loss of $15,150 in July. Although the transit company's operating revenues advanced 24 per cent of $1,307,004 during the month, taxes jumped exactly 129.4 per cent to $189,343 in July as compared with the same month last year. Operating expenses, excluding taxes and depreciation, were $959,457 as compared with $750,650.

Provision for depreciation was $130,319 against $112,877 last year, the increase being attributed to new street cars and buses put in service. Revenue passengers carried during July totaled 126,143,744 against 106,384,147 last year, an increase of 18.6 per cent.

For the seven months ended July 31, Capital Transit showed net income of $630,290, a 42 per cent jump over net of $442,100 in the same period last year. Operating revenues in the period went up $1,491,263, from $7,410,316 to $8,841,580. Taxes leaped 55 per cent in the seven months, from $639,159 to $993,093. Operating expenses of $5,969,492 were 16.2 per cent heavier than last year.

Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. reported a sharp decline in July net earning despite a $300,000 increase in operating revenues for the month and a record total of telephones in service on July 31.

Net income in July totaled $89,059 which was $39,748 less than in the same month last year. Operating revenues for the month were $1,311,205 against $1,076,280 a year ago. Operating expenses advanced to $1,031,951 against $768,330 in July, 1940.

There were 297,800 telephones in service at the end of July which was an increase of 2,791 telephones over the previous month. Telephone users here made 38,208,000 calls during the month, or 6,470,000 more than in July, 1940.

For the seven months ended July 31, C. & P. net income totaled $1,096,118 as compared with $1,115,714 in the corresponding 1940 period. Operating revenues aggregated $8,859,315 against $7,605,042 in 1940. Operating expenses were $6,396,595 against $5,333,152.

Charles A. Robinson, vice president and general manager, pointed out yesterday that investment in telephone plant here as of July was $9,204,177 more than in July, 1940.

Exchange's New President Seeks to Help Brokers Adjust Selves to New Social Order

The migration of Emil Schram, new president of the New York Stock Exchange, from Washington to Wall Street recalls the old saying of the late Henry R. Seager that the function of the economist is to act as social interpreter.

Likewise, H. G. Wells has pointed out that in the modern world progress is made when a specialist impinges on another specialty.

Thus, though inexperienced in stock brokerage, the retired head of the R. F. C., who succeeded Private Bill Martin as head man at the Big Board, brings to his new post eight years of impressions as a public official at Washington and his earlier experience in grain futures trading.

Conceivably the new executive's intimate knowledge of the physics and chemistry of the New Deal mind may help men in Wall Street to make a better adjustment to the new social order.

Since taking office at the beginning of July, Mr. Schram has been quietly undertaking to sell himself to his new associates in the financial district.

Thus far, Mr. Schram has evolved no magic formula for restoring the lost prestige of Money Row, but he does recognize that the stock exchange has valuable psychological and economic assets which can be legitimately promoted even in a regulated economy.

In bringing a fresh viewpoint, Mr. Schram thinks his job is to help his new clients live with regulation, rather than combat the whole concept. Here the analogy of the banks and the railroads my be relevant. Although individual bankers like to beef about the arbitrary nature of bank examiners, they nevertheless aggressively seek to augment their earning assets and are alert to the need of new business departments.

Likewise, railroad executives, though aware of the dampening effect of some aspects of the I. C. C. supervision on individual initiative, are nonetheless perpetually working to build up freight and passenger traffic.

It may well be that the next phase in Wall Street will witness the revival of merchandising in the large instead of debating the wisdom of the newer political economy.

New laws, the mood of the public, and new social concepts have outlawed much of old-fashioned Wall Street merchandising, some of which was obviously objectionable. The old merchandising included whetting the appetite for stocks through circulation of rumors, through giving calls to those who could be helpful in the manipulative technique, and through financing unofficial ballyhoo brochures by so-called investment houses and brokers. But destroying the old merchandising technique was only half the job—the destructive half. Old merchandising should be replaced by new and constructive efforts to make the public aware of the authentic character of the vast corporate enterprises.

In place of the old practices, top corporate management should authoritatively and openly take over the task. Institutional advertising under the name of the industrial, railroad or public utility company itself should be employed to make the public aware of the truth in all its lights and shadows about incorporated business. To be authentic, such promotion should be related to simplified and humanized accounting reports. Such institutional promotion will not only have a cultural value in creating better public understanding of the Nation's economic problems but will also direct the attention of savers to meritorious corporations, whose securities may merit investment consideration.

Sugar Quotas Hiked to Assure Ample Supply

By the Associated Press

Mrs. American housewife needn't worry about a rumored sugar shortage—there just isn't going to be one.

That was the prediction made yesterday afternoon by a Department of Agriculture announcement that 1941 sugar marketing quotas of the various areas supplying the United States had been increased from 8,006,836 short tons, raw value, to 9,002,976.

This makes 8,145,230 tons known to be available, compared to 6,736,000 tons actually consumed in the United States last year.

The OPACS said that shortage reports were based on these events:

1. Distribution of the sugar supply is always spotty as fall approaches and it is not an unusual condition.

2. Announcement of the fixing of a price ceiling of $3.50 per 100 pounds on duty paid raw sugar created some contract confusion that is now being straightened out.

3. Rumors that there might be changes in the Cuban sugar tariff rates.

4. A shipping problem from both Cuba and the Philippines.

5. There has been a heavy demand on refineries by sugar distributors because of increased consumption resulting from rising employment and additional purchasing power.

However, OPACS announced, none of the five events would cause a sugar shortage. The situation—particularly the confusion arising from the price ceiling—is straightening itself out and there is no need for the American housewife to throw apprehensive eyes at her sugar supplies.

OPACS already has acted to settle forward contracts problems arising from setting of the sugar price ceiling. Refiners and producers discussed the problem here Thursday and OPACS reported the contract situation would be adjusted in the near future.

The Department of Agriculture, acting to keep sugar pouring over the counters of the Nation's grocery stores, increased the quotas for all areas, except the Philippines, Hawaii and Mainland Cane.

The increased quotas, with previous and present limits listed, were:

Continental beet, 1,925,499 and 2,230,037 short tons; Puerto Rico 991,365 and 1,146,160; Cuba 2,374,852 and 1,750,461; Virgin Islands 11,076 and 12,829, and foreign countries other than Cuba 282,859 and 440,304.

New U. S. Curb Halts Trade in Fats and Oils

By the Associated Press

Part of the commodities market was paralyzed yesterday by a Federal ban on speculative trade in fats and oils but the remainder limped through the session and managed to finish near or above previous levels.

New York cotton futures, after slumping as much as $1 a bale, closed 15 to 25 cents a bale net higher.

The cottonseed oil market, where prices had been moving steadily higher for two weeks, was suspended while traders studied the price administration's order. The lard and cottonseed oil markets in Chicago also were closed.

At Chicago, soybeans, which reflect closely price changes in competing oils and fats, tumbled around 3 cents a bushel. Wheat recovered from its lows to close down ¼ to ⅝ cent cent a bushel, corn was ¼ cent up to ¼ cent lower and oats lost ⅝ to 1 cent.

Livestock prices eased, hogs losing 15 to 25 cents per hundredweight. Cattle values slipped but lambs were steady.

World sugar futures slipped .05 to .06½ of a cent a pound in light trading and coffee prices were irregular.

Wool tops, which have been advancing steadily since August 12, added another .1 to .5 of a cent a pound to values.

The Associated Press index of spot prices of 35 commodities advanced to 92.47 per cent of the 1924 average from 92.39 per cent the day before, another new four-year high.

Clarification Sought

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Cottonseed oil futures trading was suspended today while commodities exchange officials sought clarification of the Federal ban on speculation in fats and oils futures.

While Federal price authorities explained that their order was not intended to halt all futures trading in the commodity, dealers were included to await positive definition of what sort of business would be permitted before resuming.

A conference between exchange and price administration representatives will attempt to iron out uncertainties in time for resumption of trade next Tuesday, it was reported.

The cottonseed oil markets at Chicago and New Orleans also were closed, as were lard markets here and at Chicago.

Rule Not Designed To Prevent Trade

The Office of Price Administration said in a statement yesterday that there was nothing in its schedule on fats and oils "designed to prevent trading in futures contracts in fats and oils, including lard and cottonseed oil on any organized commodity exchange."

The statement said that the limitation on deliveries against forward purchases did not apply to futured contracts. The schedule, designed to check speculation, was announced Thursday night.

Consolidated Aircraft Spurts to New High; General List Sluggish in Irregular Range

New York, Aug. 29.—Specialties provided the principal recovery impetus in today's stock market while leaders generally took a nap at slightly lower levels.

Hesitancy prevailed at the start and irregular price tendencies continued to the close. Transfers totaled 351,680 shares compared with 401,000 yesterday.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was off .1 of a point at 43.6, the first decline in this composite since August 21. At today's finish the average had come back a full point from the month's low of 42.6 and was not far from where it entered August at 44.1.

The news, on the whole, was more favorable than otherwise and the faltering performance of the list was attributed partly to lightening of commitments for the lengthy holiday. Major markets will recess Monday for Labor Day. War bulletins were unexciting and a little encouragement was derived from reports Washington and Tokyo might eradicate some of their difficulties. Japanese dollar bonds at least reflected optimism, jumping 1 to 7 points.

Consolidated Aircraft was the liveliest mover in the stock division, climbing 1⅞ to a new 1941 top at 42⅜. Talk of a 100 per cent stock dividend by this company was a factor. Douglas Aircraft was up 2¼. New year's highs were posted for American Woolen preferred, American Commercial Alcohol, Schenley and Hiram Walker. Distilling stocks were spurred by expectations of mounting demand for industrial alcohol for the defense program.

Westinghouse dropped 2½ points in the wake of an expansion financing program involving issuance of new common and debentures. A shade lower were United States Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Santa Fe, Great Northern, General Electric, Boeing, Union Carbide and United States Gypsum.

Firm spots included United States Rubber, Glenn Martin, National Distillers, Standard Oil (N. J.), American Telephone, Pennsylvania, Sears Roebuck, Woolworth and International Nickel.

Bell Aircraft pushed up in the Curb and along with American Cyanamid "B," Midvale and Brewster Aero. Cities Service, Pantepec and Phoenix securities were in the losing column. Turnover here was around 82,000 shares against 101,000 Thursday.

Advances of 2 to more than 8 points in Japanese government, private and municipal bonds held main attention in today's market.

The fresh rises were on top of substantial improvement late in Thursday's session after word from Washington and indications at Tokyo that a determined effort was being made on all sides to settle outstanding differences between the Oriental and other world powers.

Among the issues involved were: The Government 5½s at 46, Shinyetsu Electric 6½s at 38, Tokyo Electric Light 6s at 38½, Oriental Development 6s at 37½ and the 5½s at 35. A fair demand lifted some South American issues, including Uruguay 3½s and Buenos Aires 4⅜s a point or more.

Domestic bonds reflected extreme steadiness although most price changes were in fractions. On the upside were, among others, Erie General 4s at 58, Consolidated Edison 3½s at 105⅛. Baltimore & Ohio convertibles of '60 at 32¼, Alleghany stamped 5s at 64, Western Union 5s at 85¼ and Missouri 5s at 27¾.

U. S. Governments were a shade higher on both the Stock Exchange and over the counter but trading was generally light.

Anaconda Nets $22,844,060 In Six Months

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 29.—Anaconda Copper Mining Co. and subsidiaries reported today net earnings of $22,844,060 for the first half of 1941, equal to $2.63 a capital share, compared with $17,549,546 or $2.02 a share in the corresponding 1940 period.

In addition, the company's statement said, the equity in the undistributed earnings of subsidiaries not consolidated and and therefore not included in the income account amounted to $705,539.

For the first half of 1941 the company set aside $17,265,000 as provision for United States and foreign income taxes, including a provision of $6,900,000 for excess profits taxes.

Other Earnings Statements

General Aniline & Film Corporation reported consolidated net income for the first half of 1941 of $2,348,317, equal to $3.20 a common "A" share, compared with $1,492,197, or $2.03 per share, in the first six months of 1940. Federal tax provision, allowing for anticipated increases, was $2,750,625 for the 1941 period, compared with $419,095 in the first half of 1940.

Electric Bond & Share Co., utility holding concern, reported net earnings for the quarter ended June 30 amounting to $9,362,830, equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to 49 cents a common share. This compared with $2,172,365 or 1 cent a share in the like quarter last year. The company said the improvement was largely due to savings in taxes as a result of disposal of 300,000 shares of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation during the period.

National Power & Light Co., affiliated with the Electric Bond & Share system, reported June quarter net income of $1,619,764, or 21 cents a common share, compared with $2,037,725, or 25 cents a share in the like period last year.

Crown Zellerbach Corporation, newsprint makers reported net profit for the quarter ended July 31 of $2,251,726, or 76 cents a common share in the same period last year. Taxes in the latest period were estimated on the basis of the 1941 Federal Revenue Act, now pending.

International Hydro-Electric system reported net loss of $189,585 for the quarter ended June 30, compared with net profit of $175,035 in the like period of last year. Irwin L. Moore, president, cited increased operating expenses and taxes of domestic subsidiaries and Canadian dividend taxes on its income from Gatineau Power Co., Canadian subsidiary.

Fifth of U. S. Sales at Retail Go to Motorists

A statistical guide for measuring effects of the defense limitations on the production of automotive products and the emergency curtailment of petroleum distribution was provided yesterday by the Census Bureau in a special study showing that these related fields in normal times account for about one-fifth of the Nation's total retail trade volume.

The bureau based its compilation on the volume of sales, the number of establishments, the extent of employment and pay rolls in these industries on records of their retail activities in 1939.

The manufacturing, wholesale and retail activities of the automotive industry, combined with the retail and wholesale distribution of petroleum, it found, account for 1,561,309 employes with an annual normal pay roll of $2,212,954,348.

Breakdown of Activities

A breakdown of these activities was pdesented as follows:

Personnel, salaries and wages reported by manufacturing establishments whose operations are closely connected with the production of automobiles:

Industry	Number of employes reported	Salaries and wages
Motor vehicles, motor vehicle bodies, parts and accessories	458,723	$791,483,989
Automobile trailers (for attachment to passenger cars)	1,696	3,000,329
Rubber tires and inner tubes	63,131	113,094,771
Automotive electrical equipment	20,977	32,856,000
Batteries	18,666	27,344,913
Automobile stampings	9,839	15,253,456
*Lighting fixtures	5,137	7,151,548
†Electric lamps (bulbs)	1,159	1,838,906
*Radios (automobile)	5,892	7,560,670
*Automobile hardware	8,690	11,521,145
*Glass (laminated)	8,651	12,430,648
*Automotive seat springs	5,721	7,687,890
*Automobile pads	1,263	1,370,668
†Tire fabrics	13,135	12,776,000
Plant, operated by motor vehicle manufacturers with products for direct or indirect use in automobiles, not in above industries	15,613	27,480,343
Total	640,903	$1,071,022,343

†Reported by textile plants engaged primarily in the production of tire fabrics.

The tabulation, it was explained, does not include the personnel engaged in the production of pig iron, hot-rolled and forged steel, nonferrous metal products, bolts and nuts, screw-machine products, upholstery, paints, enamels, and lacquer, pipe and tubing, ball and roller bearings, automobile chassis springs, hand tools, etc., made in plants not operated by automobile manufacturers.

422,485 Units

The retail, wholesale, and service activities in the distribution of automotive products and petroleum support 422,485 establishments in the United States, of which 302,800 are active proprietors of unincorporated businesses, the report said. These 422,485 units employ 921,306 persons with an annual pay roll of $1,141,922,000.

Of these 422,485 units of business, 301,990 are retailers, and their gross annual sales of automotive products and petroleum amount to $8,368,530,000. In the wholesale field there are 41,614 units, doing a gross business of $77,045,244,000. In the repair and service end of the automotive business there are 78,881 establishments with annual receipts of $440,892,000.

In retail petroleum distribution there are 241,858 filling stations with gross annual sales of $2,822,495,000, of which 231,475 are active proprietors of unincorporated businesses; they employ 235,527 persons and their annual pay roll is $196,934,000. There is naturally a large amount of duplication in the $8,368,530,000 volume of retailers and the $7,045,244,000 in the wholesale end, the report said.

Three Copper Mines Allowed U. S. Subsidy

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Daily Metal Reporter, a trade paper, said today three copper mines whose cost of production was above normal had been granted a Government subsidy of 1 cent a pound above the 12-cent ceiling price for refined copper.

The arrangement was said to include a provision for miners to receive $1 a day in addition to their base pay. The companies mentioned were Copper Range Co., Isle Royal Copper Co., and the Quincy Mining Co., all of Houghton County, Mich.

When the 12-cent ceiling was set August 12, the price administrator's office said it would recommend purchase of high-cost copper by Metals Reserve Co., a subsidiary of RFC. It was assumed, therefore, that the subsidized copper would be added to Federal stock piles.

Output of Portland Cement Jumps 30.2%

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Mines reported yesterday that Portland Cement production in July was 16 million barrels, an increase of 30.2 per cent compared with the same month last year.

July shipments, the Bureau said, jumped 24.1 per cent over the same period of 1940 to 16,687,000 barrels, while stocks at mills dropped 7.3 per cent to 21,178,000.

Mill value of shipments during the first half of 1941—$71,644,000 barrels—was estimated at $105,440,000.

CAB Authorizes Step to Launch Africa Air Line

By the Associated Press

The Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday authorized Pan American Airways-Africa, Ltd., and Pan American Air Ferries, Inc.

Pan American will own all the stock of the two companies and its officers also will serve as officers of the subsidiaries.

Pan American-Africa, Ltd., will operate entirely in Africa. This company will ferry passengers, mail and property, including spare parts for planes, and assist in the returning of ferry personnel.

Pan American Air Ferries, Inc., will act only in the ferrying of planes from the United States to the middle East.

An application for a certificate to operate over the United States-Africa route is pending before the board. A hearing will be held September 4.

Reorganization Plan for Soo Line Submitted to ICC

By the Associated Press

A plan for reorganization of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railway, which would sharply reduce its capitalization and fixed interest charges, was proposed to the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday by one of its examiners.

Under the plan advanced by Ralph H. Jewell, the examiner, capitalization of the Soo Line would be reduced from $189,202,628 to about $87,000,000 and annual fixed interest charges from $6,631,322 to approximately $53,500, all for equipment obligations which would be assumed by the reorganized company.

The examiner held that present preferred and common stockholders were not entitled to receive anything for their holdings.

The Canadian Pacific Railway, under the plan, would be allowed to purchase 25 per cent of the common stock of the reorganized Soo Line at $2 per share.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 29 (AP).—Grain prices were forced into a retreat today, wheat and oats dipping more than a cent a bushel at times.

Selling included profit taking and hedging as well as general liquidation touched off by the announcement trading in lard and cottonseed oil futures following an order of the price administrator forbidding purely speculative trade in fats and oils. Soybeans, which recently had derived much strength from price gains of cottonseed oil and lard, tumbled more than 3 cents at one stage.

The decline attracted buying to cover previous short sales or in connection with transactions in cash wheat, flour or other processors' products. Prices rallied from early lows and wheat closed ⅛@⅜ cent lower than yesterday, September 1.17⅛, December 1.17⅛@1.17⅜, corn ⅛ off to ⅛ up, September 77⅛@77⅜, December 81⅛@81½; oats ⅝@1 down; soybeans 1@1¼ lower and rye ⅝@⅞ down.

Suspension of trading in lard and cottonseed oil was put into effect pending clarification of the administrator's order. Traders were not clear about the status of speculative commitments now awaiting settlement.

Two representatives of the exchange went to Washington to discuss the matter and directors will act on their report before the opening tomorrow.

Adm. Land Asks Barges to Ease Oil Shortage

Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, yesterday advocated construction of 100 concrete oil barges and utilization of 25 seized Axis tankers as a solution to the gasoline shortage in Eastern States.

Testifying before the Senate committee investigating the petroleum situation, the Maritime Commission head hit at the proposed construction of a huge pipeline from Southwestern petroleum fields.

However, OPM Director William S. Knudsen told his press conference he expected to receive Tuesday a report on possibilities of acquiring sufficient steel for a pipeline from the Southwest to Illinois, where it could connect with present pipelines to the East.

While Knudsen said OPM's steel division was trying to work out an arrangement whereby the pipeline could obtain the steel without hampering the shipbuilding program, Land told the committee:

"I don't know where they are going to get the 750,000 tons of steel, but if it is going to come from Navy ships and my ships, I'm against it."

Construction of the 100 reinforced concrete barges, to be towed by tankers, would require only 100,000 tons of steel, he said.

Admiral Land blamed the oil shortage on a "pseudo-gentleman named Hitler," and said it was "further caused by the laws of Congress."

He said later, however, that he was not "blaming Congress" for necessary burdens of the Administration's defense program.

To a committeeman's question whether the Administration had fixed any policy concerning future transfer of tankers to the British or other foreign services, Land retorted heatedly:

"I understand my job is to obey my Commander in Chief or get the hell out. I don't make policy; I take orders."

After the meeting Maloney said that so far charges of British misuse of American tankers already transferred had not been substantiated.

Later he said the petroleum picture was "less discouraging" than heretofore, but refused to elaborate on the statement. He stated:

"Our committee made considerable headway today, insofar as the investigation is concerned, toward solving the petroleum shortage in the East. We procured considerable data and the picture now, both with respect to gasoline and bunker oil, is less discouraging."

Simultaneously, in Richmond, F. Harvey Skehan, Standard Oil Co. division manager, said that instead of the predicted shortage of gasoline in September there would be more available than a year ago for that city.

Even with the new cut in gallonage to dealers, "there will be more than one million gallons more gas available for September than there were for the same month of last year," Skehan said.

Leon Henderson, OPM price administrator, yesterday sent telegrams to mayors of 40 leading cities in the Middle Atlantic and Northwestern States asking their cooperation in informing the public of the "maximum fair gasoline prices" established by the office of Price Administration.

Military Rites Set Today for Col. Clapham

Funeral services for Col. John F. Clapham, U. S. Army (retired), who died yesterday at Walter Reed General Hospital, will be held at 9:30 a. m. today at the Fort Myer gate of Arlington National Cemetery. Interment will be with full military honors in section 7 of the cemetery.

Col. Clapham was born in New York 65 years ago. He served as an enlisted man in the Army from 1898 to 1901, when he was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry. As a young officer he was acclaimed the best rifle shot in the Army.

He was transferred to the Adjutant General's Department in 1922 and was stationed in Washington from 1930 to 1934, in that capacity. He was on duty at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., at the time of his retirement in October, 1940, and since then has been residing in Plattsburg, N. Y.

He leaves two sisters, Mrs. Sarah C. Saxton, of Plattsburg, and Mrs. Mary Brownell, of Oswego, N. Y.; a brother, Charles Clapham, of Pittsburgh; a daughter, Mrs. Carl Truesdell, of Puerto Rico, and a nephew, Col. L. B. Clapham, of Atlanta, Ga.

John Walsh Funeral Rites Will Be Today

Funeral services will be held this morning for John Walsh, 2311 Connecticut Avenue, only surviving brother of Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, at the St. Thomas the Apostle Church, 2710 Twenty-seventh Street Northwest. Burial will follow at Mount Olivet Cemetery, Bladensburg Road Northwest.

Mr. Walsh was born in Two Rivers, Wis., on January 15, 1872. After being graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1895, he practiced law in Kewanee and Washburn, Wis. Always interested in Democratic politics, Mr. Walsh was a delegate to the National Democratic Convention of 1912. At this convention he seconded the nomination of Woodrow Wilson for President. After the formation of the Federal Trade Commission by President Wilson, Mr. Walsh became its general counsel. This post he held until 1920, when he resigned to enter private practice. Since then he had been practicing law in Washington.

Mr. Walsh married Miss Edna Preble Jones of Washington in June, 1939, after the death of his first wife, the former Miss Ethel Stavely, in May, 1938.

A member of the Wisconsin and American Bar Associations, Mr. Walsh was also a member of the American Academy of Political and Social Sciences. He was a trustee of the Belleau War Memorial Association and a director of the National Federation of Big Brothers and Big Sisters. As a delegate from the District of Columbia to the National Democratic Convention of 1939 in Philadelphia, he seconded the nomination of President Roosevelt.

He is survived by his widow and one daughter, Mrs. Augustus Long, of Chicago, and two grandchildren.

Last Rites Today For Mrs. Dalby, Wife of Colonel

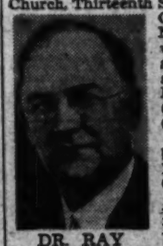
Funeral services will be held at 10:30 this morning at the Pumphrey funeral home, 7005 Wisconsin Avenue, Bethesda, Md., for Mrs. Dorothy Bowles Dalby, wife of Lieut. Col. Z. Lewis Dalby, auxiliary reserve, Chief Counsel of the United States Employes Compensation Commission. Mrs. Dalby died Thursday at her home, 1615 Longfellow Street Northwest, from a heart attack. She was 60.

Mrs. Dalby was born in Cherryfield, Me., a descendent of some of the State's most distinguished colonial families. At school in Boston she became an accomplished musician. After their marriage, she and Col. Dalby made their home in Washington. Mrs. Dalby was a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and for several years was regent of the President Monroe Chapter. She also served as State chairman and as national vice chairman of the National Historical Magazine.

Mrs. Dalby leaves her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Louise Dalby Meigs, of Washington, and Mrs. Abner Bieberman, of Hollywood, Calif.; one son, Henry Bowles Dalby, of New York; two brothers, Earl Bowles, of Berkeley, Calif., and Irving Bowles, of Richmond, Va., and four grandchildren.

Rites for Dr. Ray, Pastor, to Be Held At Epworth Church

Funeral services for Dr. Clifton K. Ray will be held on Monday at 11 a. m. at Epworth Methodist Church, Thirteenth Street and North Carolina Avenue Northeast, where he had served as pastor since 1938. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.



DR. RAY

The rites will be conducted by Dr. Horace E. Cromer, superintendent of the East Washington Methodist District, and Dr. Ernest Woolfe, of Clifton Forge, Va.

Dr. Ray, who died Thursday at his summer home at Fairhaven, Md., had recently been reelected president of the Washington Methodist Ministerial Association for the second term.

He was a trustee and board member of the Methodist Home for the Aged at Gaithersburg, Md., and of the Strawbridge Home. He was formerly pastor of Greene Memorial Methodist Church in Roanoke, Va., and Francis Asbury Methodist Church here.

Dr. Ray was a native Washingtonian, son of the late John W. and Annie A. Ray. He attended local schools, and was graduated from Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., and Randolph-Macon College.

Anti-Hitlerite Guerrillas Enter Reich, Cause 'Anxiety'

London, Aug. 29 (U.S.).—Anti-Hitler guerrilla bands have penetrated into Germany, causing "some anxiety" among the Nazi population, according to a Reuters (British) dispatch from Moscow tonight, quoting the Soviet Tass News Agency.

Return of the Natives

Lisbon, Aug. 29 (AP).—Two 'teen-age California-born youths, one of whom worked for eight months as a machinist in a German Messerschmitt airplane factory, arrived here today after four and one-half months of walking, bicycling and swimming past German guards in Belgium and France.

They were Arthur and Alfred Perry, 17 and 18, respectively, whose mother took them to Antwerp, where she operated a small perfume shop, when they were in rompers. Arthur said he was born in Visalia, Calif., Alfred in San Francisco.

Alfred said he and his brother were working in an Antwerp factory when the Germans invaded Belgium.

They started for Paris, got in the jam at Dunkerque during the British withdrawal and were caught by the Germans and returned to Antwerp.

Alfred said he worked there in the German-operated factory until last March, when they started their journey to Lisbon. He added that their mother saw them off, hoping they could get to the United States and join the Army.

French Ordered To Give Up Radios

London, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—The German-controlled radio in Paris tonight broadcast a German military order demanding the civilians immediately surrender all radio sets capable of picking up foreign stations.

Italy Halts Warships

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Lack of materials has caused Italy to stop construction on two 35,000-ton battleships, advices reaching maritime circles said today.

The ships—the Impero, scheduled for completion at Genoa in 1942, and the Roma, reported last year as ready for launching at Trieste—were of the four-ship Littorio class, heralded by the Italians as being "unequalled in any other navy."

Finn Talks Reported

London, Saturday, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—A Daily Sketch political commentator said today that Finnish-Russian discussions looking toward a separate peace are under way at an undisclosed neutral spot. Finland expects to retain her territory taken by Russia, and retaken by Finland with German help.

Pact to Repay Lease-Lend Aid In Final Form

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

A written formula, whereby Great Britain would repay the United States "in goods and services" for lease-lend aid, has now been worked out in more final form and may be announced coincidentally with the President's new request for lease-lend funds, or shortly afterward, it was learned yesterday.

Negotiations for a preliminary agreement defining principles of repayment were first reported in The Post July 11.

As the drafts now stand, informed quarters said, Great Britain's chief concessions to the United States would be relaxation of trade barriers after the war.

Cartels To Be Revised

This would include alteration or removal of curbs on production and exports of vital raw materials, such as rubber and tin. Britain would agree to revise drastically the monopolistic cartels that reserve the world's richest areas exclusively for British business.

In addition, the Empire tariff walls would be lowered, allowing American goods to flow more freely into British countries, making it possible for the output of both countries to find a natural, rather than an artificial market.

Such concessions as these, it was pointed out, are definitely provided for in the Eight Points of Peace promulgated by the President and Winston Churchill at their conference in the Atlantic. One of the points provides for equal access to raw materials.

Point four says:

"They will endeavor, with due respect for their existing obligations, to further the enjoyment by all states, great or small, victor or vanquished, of access, on equal terms, to the trade and the raw materials of the world which are needed for their economic prosperity."

Something in Return

President Roosevelt is described as desirous of obtaining British signature on a repayment agreement, in order to demonstrate to the country that it will receive something in return for its lease-lend efforts to help Britain.

He is said to be anxious not to repeat the story of debts incurred by the Allied nations during the World War, which remain unpaid and at one time were a serious cause of friction between the United States and Great Britain and France.

Also, the President is said to believe that a repetition of the destroyer-bases deal with Great Britain would have a wholesome effect on the American attitude toward the war. Last year the United States swapped 50 destroyers for eight British bases in the Atlantic.

Announcement of the repayment agreement may be made when the new lease-lend request goes to Congress, it was learned. This request is not expected to be made until the Harriman mission returns from Moscow.

The meeting between the President and the Prime Minister and the multitude of pressing war problems that demand an immediate answer have delayed completion of the negotiations for the repayment pact.

Mrs. Winant Leaves

London, Aug. 29 (AP).—Mrs. John G. Winant, wife of the United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, left England by plane today for Lisbon en route to the United States. She expected to fly the Atlantic as a clipper passenger.

Forecast for the District of Columbia—Fair, but with some cloudiness and somewhat higher temperature Saturday and Saturday night; Sunday considerable cloudiness with an occasional shower; moderate southerly winds.

For Maryland and Virginia—Fair, but with some cloudiness in east and increasing cloudiness over west portions with afternoon showers in extreme west portions Saturday, somewhat higher temperature Saturday and Saturday night; Sunday mostly cloudy with somewhat higher temperatures and an occasional shower.

Conditions

The extensive eastern high-pressure system is now passing eastward off the Middle and North Atlantic Coast. But some cool dry air remains over the Ohio Valley and the Middle and North Atlantic States, causing bright, sunny and moderately warm weather by day and clear cool nights. Warm humid of semi-tropical origin is now confined to the States bordering on the Gulf of Mexico and is spreading rapidly northward over the Mississippi Valley and Plains States, where it has been attended by rapidly rising temperatures which are now above normal. Some of this warm humid air has spread westward into New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado and there has been showers and local thunderstorms along the Gulf Coast and the Southern Rocky Mountain Region during the past 24 hours. Showers and local thunderstorms with some locally heavy amounts persists in the upper lake region. Cool showery weather continues over the Northern Rocky Mountain States.

Texas Girl Wins Film Contract

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

DONIVEE PURKEY, 19, of El Paso, has been signed to a long-term film contract. Her first role will be in "Reap the Wild Wind." She was discovered by a talent scout who saw her in a play at the Texas College of Mines. She is shown strolling down a Hollywood Street

C. I. O. Miners Agree to End Gypsum Tie-up

The National Defense Mediation Board announced yesterday that C. I. O. United Mine Workers' chemical division had agreed to end a two-month strike of 17 plants of the United States Gypsum Corporation.

The strike, involving 3000 workers, had tied up an estimated 40 per cent of the Nation's production of gypsum, plaster and wall board.

Board officials said the union reported it was notifying its members to return to work at once, on the promise of the board to investigate the issues of the dispute.

Previously, the board had denied the union's demand for a master contract covering all the affected plants, and recommended, instead, that the company's officials come to Washington to negotiate 17 separate contracts, covering wage demands, vacations, grievance machinery and union security. Although the union accepted the recommendation, the company refused.

Meantime, another union, the A. F. L. Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, rejected a Mediation Board appeal to end its strike at the Pullman Standard Car Manufacturing Co. plant at Michigan City, Ind. The board scheduled a hearing on the case for September 8.

At McKees Rocks, Pa., the pressed Steel Car Co., making armor plate for the Navy and shell forgings for the Army, was closed by a strike for the second time within a month. A spokesman for the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee said the stoppage was ordered because of antiunion discrimination. About 2500 were affected by the strike.

Funeral Services For Betty Irwin Set for Monday

Funeral services for Mrs. Betty Fletcher Irwin, 20, wife of Donald E. Irwin, former Redskin football player, will be held at 10 a. m. Monday at the home of her mother, Mrs. Richard Fletcher, 4806 Nebraska Avenue Northwest.

Services at St. Columbus Episcopal Church and burial in Rock Creek Cemetery will follow. Mrs. Irwin died Tuesday in San Francisco, where her husband is now associated with the Department of Justice.

She was born in Washington, attending the public schools here, and was a graduate of Woodrow Wilson High School. She was a member of Beta Tau Epsilon sorority here. Her marriage to Irwin took place last January.

Surviving, besides her husband and mother, are a sister, Mrs. Evalyn Bolling, of Honolulu, and six brothers, Charles, Richard, jr., John G. and William C. Fletcher, all of Washington; George, of Helena, Mont., and Robert Fletcher, of Puerto Rico.

Last Rites Set Today for Mrs. Hutchison

Funeral services for Mrs. Lucy M. Hutchinson, 171 Hobart Street Northwest, will be held at the Hines funeral home at 1:30 p. m. today. She died Thursday after a brief illness.

The wife of Frank M. Hutchison, retired Government employe, Mrs. Hutchison was a native of Loudoun County, Va., and had lived in this city more than 20 years. She had been active in the Mount Vernon Methodist Church.

Besides her husband, she is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Lucile H. Newcomb, of Washington, and Mrs. Maude H. Dooley, of Arlington, Va.; a sister, Mrs. Mattie Palmer, and a son, Wilfred C. Southworth, both of this city.

Nazis Couldn't Invade U. S., Says Lindbergh

By the Associated Press

Oklahoma City, Aug. 29.—Before an orderly crowd which just about filled a makeshift stadium, Charles A. Lindbergh said tonight only internal collapse would enable either America or Germany successfully to attack the other across the Atlantic Ocean.

"It seems clear to me," said the airman in an address at an America First Committee rally, "that the quickest way for Germany to lose a war would be to attack America, and that the quickest way for America to lose a war would be to attack Germany."

Some boos were mixed with applause when Herbert K. Hyde, chairman of the Oklahoma City America First Committee, introduced Lindbergh and Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, at the start of the rally.

Sheriff George Goff, who with 25 of his deputies policed the park, estimated the crowd at 7000.

Lindbergh's speech, along with that of Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, was delivered at Sandlot Park, usually the site of semipro baseball games. The park was obtained after the city council denied use to Lindbergh of the Municipal Auditorium.

Lindbergh did not refer to the council's action, but Senator Wheeler charged that "the city council might abridge or impair freedom of speech, and all the civil liberties guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States—but they have not suppressed all civil rights."

Compares Air, Sea Power

Lindbergh referred to the similarities of air power and sea power and commented that "aviation has developed as much in a generation as shipping developed over a period of centuries.

Germany has used aviation to change the entire technique of warfare, both on land and on the sea," he stated. "England is using aviation to strike back at a continent she is unable to invade. The American interventionists are using aviation to support their claim that the Atlantic Ocean has dwindled to the size of the English Channel. The Administration is using aviation to justify the occupation of Iceland, to prepare the way for an occupation of Africa, and to add to the general hysteria of war.

"If the British navy, with its bases strung out from Alexandria to Scapa Flow—if that navy, with Gibraltar and Malta to assist it, cannot remain within bombing range of the European coast, then how can any navy, or combination of navies, cross the ocean, and without a single base in this hemisphere, land an expeditionary force on America shores?

"It was obvious, even before this war started, that air power made it costly, if not impossible, for naval forces to operate within effective bombing range of any enemy coast adequately protected by aircraft. This meant that troops could not be landed and maintained on any coast where an enemy had strong supremacy of the air. These facts have been confirmed by the results of naval and air battles off the coast of Norway, in the Skaggerak, in the North Sea, off the coast of Greece, and in the vicinity of Sicily and Crete.

Oceans' Value Enhanced

"It was just as obvious that the great distance across the ocean placed America outside the effective bombing range of European aircraft, and that even if it were possible to establish European air bases in South America, which I believe we can prevent, the United States would still be outside their effective bombing range.

"Instead of reducing the value of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans from the standpoint of our security, aviation makes them more important than ever before. Air power practically removes the danger of attack by sea; and the oceans themselves prevent effective attacks by air.

"If we attend properly to our own affairs, no European or Asiatic power will dare attack us, and if we attend properly to our own affairs, none will so desire."

Wheeler declared that he believed in freedom of speech and added, "I intend to exercise it."

"Someone has said that free speech is the brain of the Republic—and that the ballot box is still the ruler of America," he said. "With that I agree. Some people in Oklahoma disagree.

"I am the sole proprietor of myself. No party, no organization, no Senator, and no President controls me. I know that one man in the right will eventually and finally become a majority in a democracy."

If radio's commuting record isn't held by Washington's John Charles Daly, we'd like to see the evidence of his nearest competitor.

For, as CBS's roving defense reporter, it's a rare week that John Charles doesn't travel more than 1000 miles to and from his home station, WJSV.

A set part of his schedule is to go to New York every Tuesday night to serve as narrator in CBS's "Report to the Nation"—which means a minimum of about 450 miles back and forth there every week.

Then, for his Sunday appearances on "The Spirit of 41," he really gets going. For instance, for that show he's journeyed to Fort Benning, Ga.—800 miles each way; to Boston's Navy Yard—475 miles each way; to Fort Custer at Battle Creek, Mich.—about 700 miles each way; to Fort Monmouth, N. J.—about 200 miles each way; to Fort Knox, Ky.—that's about 750 miles each way. Tomorrow he's to be at Fort Bragg, N. C.—which means about 350 miles coming and going.

We're not including such sissy trips as the mere 40-mile jaunts to the Marine Base at Quantico, Va., or ditto, to Annapolis. And there have been a few incidental trips in the meantime that he's taken to Hyde Park with the Presidential party.

His nearest competitors, that we can see, are Burgess Meredith and Bill Slocum, who appear on "The Spirit of 41" with him.

Contract Bridge

Difficulty with a slam contract is reported by J. C., contributor of the hand in today's box. Declarers who played the hand at six hearts were successful; of those who tried for a higher match-point score at no trump only one managed to make it.

Here is J. C.'s letter:

"I am enclosing a hand played last night in a six-table duplicate game, which we thought quite interesting.

Today's Hand

North-South Vulnerable

NORTH DEALER

	♠ A8 ♡ K Q 5 4 ◇ K Q 10 8 3 ♣ 7 3
♠ K J 7 2 ♡ 9 8 2 ◇ J ♣ K Q 10 4 2	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ 9 6 4 3 ♡ 10 3 ◇ 9 6 5 ♣ 9 8 6 5
	♠ Q 10 5 ♡ A J 7 6 ◇ A 7 4 2 ♣ A J

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ◇	Pass	6 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ♣.

"Three tables arrived at six hearts and made six. Three tables arrived at six no trumps, but only one player succeeded in fulfilling his contract.

"The king of clubs was opened and was taken by the ace in dummy. Upon looking over the hand South realized his only hope was to find West with the king of spades as well as the queen of clubs, which was, of course, marked in his hand by the lead of the king.

"The nine red cards were then played, South throwing off a small spade on the last diamond. This reduced West to the queen of clubs and the king, jack of spades; East's discards were immaterial. At this point the seven of clubs was played, forcing West into the lead. South finessed the lead of the jack of spades and made his contract for a 'top on the board.'

"I contend this is a 'squeeze and end play;' am I correct?

J. C. is right, declarer's maneuver for his contract would be called a 'squeeze end play.' The trouble with most of us who fail to bring in tricks by squeezes is that we fear to lead out that last winning card which would put the pinchers on the enemy. Instead, we fuss around with hopeless finesses and other feeble dodges.

At six hearts the play is safe and easy. Declarer draws trumps, throws the losing club on the long diamond, gives up a spade trick and ruffs a spade with North's fourth trump.
